MOSCOW

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Aug. 11—(AP)—The Red army, reinforced by a rising tide of militia, was reported holding firm along the central battlefront today but officials acknowledged that defense lines at the north and south flanks were drawn back nearer Leningrad and deeper into the Ukraine.

Fighting continued throughout last night in the long-contested Smolensk salient and at Bel Tserkov, south of Kiev, a mid-day communique said, but a new battle was intensifying in the Uman area halfway between Kiev and Odessa in the Ukraine.

The Russians also reported fighting yesterday in another new sector, near Solsti, directly south of Leningrad and 70 miles east of the Estonian frontier.

The Red army reported effective use of cavalry in its traditional role of lightning attack with the opposing lines.

The communique described the tactics used by one cavalry group to shatter a German regiment. As preparation for the attack one cavalry squadron was ordered to make a withdrawal.

A company of the German regiment attempted to outflank this unit, whereupon the Russians attacked in force, wiped out the entire company, it was said, and split the regiment into several groups, encircling some.

Only a small portion of the regiment, identified as the 480th, was able to withdraw and about 500 Germans were killed and wounded and others taken prisoner, according to the Russians. Reported destroyed were 19 tanks, eight mor-

BERLIN

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Aug. 11—Rapid progress everywhere in "pursuit of the retreating enemy in the southern Ukraine" and developments according to plan on all other sectors of the eastern front were reported today in a taciturn communique from Adolph Hitler's headquarters.

The war bulletin thus reverted to terse generality after its voluminous claims of last week. Other German sources, however, insisted the entire Dnieper bend—embracing thousands of square miles of fertile Ukrainian plateau—was as good as lost to Russia.

On the northern front, DNB said the 180th Soviet light infantry division had been wiped out south of Lake Ilmen, east of Soltsi, which is about 120 miles south of Leningrad. The Russians were "completely annihilated," the agency said.

Confidence that Hitler's armies have cut solidly into the grain fields of the Ukrain followed upon reports of destructive German blows against the Red army in the southwest.

This optimistic outlook was based on accounts of success after success by Field Marshal Gerd von Rundstedt's German armies over Soviet forces of Marshal Semeon M. Budyenny, mustachioed Red army commander there.

"It still is an open question how far the Soviets will be able to complete their evacuation of this area without running into annihilation of themselves," said the commentary Dienst aus Deutschland, which has close Wilhelmstrasse connections.

"Great masses of the Budyenny army, it is well known, already have been destroyed," Dienst added.

While admitting that things were hottest in the grain-rich Ukraine, German sources insisted that more interesting military developments there did not mean that pressure on Moscow and Leningrad in any way had let up.

DNB made much of Saturday night's air attack upon Moscow, where it said a direct hit was scored on the Kremlin as nearly 100 planes strewed heavy explosives and fire bombs by the thousands in the biggest raid yet upon the Soviet capital.

(The Russians reported the Germans attempted another mass raid upon Moscow last night and early today and acknowledged there were dead and injured, but contended that military targets were not touched.)

Urkaine Conquest Only Just Begun for Nazis

Even if Germany captures Kiev and Odessa, occupying all of the shaded area on map, she will still be far from the richest agricultural, mineral and industrial districts of the Ukraine. Nazis still have many exhaustve miles of fighting ahead from the capital to the heart of the province.

NAVY READY TO RUN SHIPYARDS IF NECESSARY

Curtiss-Wright Propeller Plant Affected by Walkout; Mediation Board Considers Shipbuilding Company Strike

OTHER DEVELOPMENTS

By the Associated Press

A defense official said in Washington today that plans for government seizure of the Federal Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company at Kearny, N. J., were lying ready on the desk" at the Navy Department, for use if the company did not alter its "intransigeant" attitude in the strike which has tied up $493,000,000 in defense orders.

This official who is connected with OPM but declined to permit use of his name, predicted that action could be expected within 48 hours. He said it might take the form of company acceptance of a defense mediation board recommendation for settlement of the dispute with the CIO Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, or the government might take over operation of the big shipyard.

He said pressure was being brought on the management of the firm by "management representatives within the OPM." It was indicated that such repres-

Correspondent Tells of Visit to German-Captured City of Smolensk

BY ALVIN J. STEINKOPF

Smolensk, Russia (By telephone to Berlin) Aug. 11—(AP)—Smolensk, once stately Russian city on the banks of the upper Dnieper, has taken it place among the communities erased by war.

I walked over its ashes, the first American newspaperman to reach this sector of the central front since it was captured by the Germans July 16.

(The Russians, only today, declared "our troops continued fighting in Smolensk," 230 miles west of Moscow).

A ceaseless stream of German trucks rolled past the blackened chimneys of burned-out factories and homes and past the shells of the few houses which still stood precariously amidst the devastation.

Asked how much of Smolensk was destroyed, a German officer estimated 90 per cent. He declared most of the damage was caused by withdrawing Russian troops carrying out Premier Joseph Stalin's orders to "scorch the earth in the face of the enemy."

Only about 20,000 of the 160,000 civilians who resided in Smolensk a month ago have remained among the ruins.

That shows what is left.

German soldiers swarmed over the entire scene, cleaning up and bringing about order so that the German war machine may operate efficiently in the thrust on to the east.

The soldiers have little time for the problems of the civilians and pay little attention to them.

The front has moved on east a few kilometers in the direction of Moscow. Artillery rumbles in the east. Warylanes roar overhead, some of them bombers operating from airdromes which the Germans say they took over almost intact after Russian withdrawals.

The front, at segments where I approached, seemed quiet. It was explained, however, that such an appearance might be deceptive, that strategic considerations at any one moment might require troops to the right or left to thrust forward; that even in a blitz war on a front spread across a continent every soldier isn't on the move every minute.

The Germans said many of the men would be overhauling equipment, catching their breath, or even washing socks in the Dnieper, and uncounted thousands were on dusty highways, along railroads and in the air bringing up supplies which modern warfare uses at a terrific rate.

A hundred miles of travel in this combat zone—much of it in a German military transport plane—

Accidents brought death to more than a score of Pennsylvanians over the week-end, among them five brothers and sisters who perished in a fire that swept their home in Bucks county.

The five children—Alice Love, 11, Edith, 9, James, 8, Duane, 4, and Paul 2—of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Love died late Saturday night in their flaming home between Doylestown and Newtown. Another child, Hardy, 6, was saved.

Drowning victims included:

Dorothy Grabowski, 12, and her sister Frances, 10, of Philadelphia, who fell into a reservoir at Parkersburg; William Ellis Leibig, 28, of Newmanstown, Lebanon county, in Jackson's creek, near Grasonville, Md.; Herman Eugene Bishop, 18, in an abandoned ore hole on his father's farm at Carlisle; Edward F. McIntyre, 18, at a CCC camp near Renovo; and Paul H. Doney, 41, professor of English at Dickinson College, Carlisle, who lost his life in an attempt to save his 15-year-old son, Hugh, in the surf near Ocean City, Md. The boy was rescued by a companion.

Carl Edward Ceedar, 28, McKees Rocks, Pa., and Albert W. Ryha, 25, Erie, were killed at Conneaut, O., when their airplane crashed into Lake Erie a few minutes after it had taken off from Port Erie.

JAMES TO ACT ON MOST BILLS BY NIGHTFALL

Harrisburg, Aug. 11—(AP)—Governor James said today he expected to act before nightfull on all pending bills left by the 1941 legislature and leave immediately for a vacation.

"With possibly one or two exceptions, I expect to clean up all of them before the sun sets," he told his press conference.

The governor said that several additional messages to accompany his action on the bills now were being prepared and would be available later in the day.

James has affixed his signature to a total of 407 bills and vetoed 54. Bills unacted upon 30 days after the session adjournment automatically become law.

Two bills still before him commanded particular attention in the General Assembly. They were a measure increasing the legal size of tractor trailer trucks from 39,000 to 42,000 pounds and an act setting up a seven-member dairy advisory council to promulgate new statewide, uniform milk sanitation regulations.

Several others of general interest include amendments to the omnibus motor vehicle code calling for the secretary of revenue to issue limited licenses to minor traffic violators needing their automobiles for business purposes; two validating measures for municipal authorities, effecting bonds issued while city officials

U. S. EYES OUTCOME AT VICHY

Future Diplomatic Relations With French Government Depend Upon Decisions Taken at Meeting of Petain Cabinet on German Collaboration Demands; Formal Comment Lacking

NAZIS DESIRE SHARE IN EMPIRE DEFENSE

Washington, Aug. 11—(AP)—The United States made its future diplomatic relations with the French government contingent on the decisions taken today at the meeting of Marshal Petain's cabinet in Vichy.

Relations would be severed, it was reported, if the Vichy government accedes to the latest German collaboration demands and permits the Nazis the "share" they seek in defending the French empire.

This possibility caused conjecture whether the United States might then extend recognition to the "Free French" forces of General Charles De Gaulle—a step which DeGaullists believe would rebound psychologically to the benefit of their cause in most of the French possessions.

Regardless of what happens on this particular point, the belief in diplomatic circles was that the United States would adopt a vigorous counter policy against any Franco-German collaboration program promising to install Nazi forces in the strategic bases on the Atlantic seacoast of French African colonies.

Although officials were chary of formal comment, there seemed to be a disposition to expect the worst from today's deliberations at Vichy.

The opinion in some quarters was that the Vichy government had a definite purpose in view Saturday when it released the statements made in a Paris interview by Fernand De Brinon, its envoy in the occupied zone. The burden of De Brinon's remarks was that France had decided to accept the Nazi version of the new world order as opposed to the Anglo-American concept.

Any deal that would allot Germany a "share" in defending French possession, it was pointed out, would immediately bring into question the status of French colonial holdings in the western hemisphere—notably the strategically located island of Martinque in the Caribbean.

FORMER STOCK EXCHANGE HEAD LEAVES PRISON

Ossining, N. Y., Aug. 11—(AP)—Richard Whitney, who lost $11,000,000 in Wall Street, left prison walls a free man today after making a profit of $181.01 in 40 months in Sing Sing.

The 53-year-old former president of the New York Stock Exchange, paroled after serving three years and mour months of a 5-to-10 year sentence for stealing $214,000 from client brokerage accounts, was met by his brother, George, in a chauffeur-driven limousine.

Whitney greeted his brother, a J. P. Morgan partner who advanced $2,600,000 of his own fortune in a vain attempt to save Whitney's firm from bankruptcy in 1938 with a silent handclasp. Neither spoke until the big car pulled away from the prison to carry Whitney to the Barnstable, Mass., dairy farm which he will superintend.

As he emerged from the prison, wearing a slightly baggy gray suit and gray hat and squinting uncertainly in the bright sunshine, Whitney's pallid, heavy face lit with a smile.

He declined to talk with interviewers, however, declaring repeatedly but with unfailing courtesy:

"I haven't got a thing to say. Not a word. Not a word".

It was a block from the prison entrance to the waiting limousine, and the onetime spokesman of

SEEK PURCHASE TAX ON ITEMS NOT ESSENTIAL

Investment Bankers Association Proposes Levy as Alternative to Stiff Increases in Income Taxes; Set Limits for Bill

DELAY COSTING MUCH

Washington, Aug. 11—(AP)—A purchase tax on non-essential articles was suggested by the Investment Bankers Association today as an alternative to stiff increases in income taxes.

In a statement presented to the Senate finance committee by Harcourt Amory of Boston, chairman of its federal taxation committee, the association said that the tax should exempt such purchases as food, rent, gas, electricity and children's clothing. The association suggested that a 5 per cent tax be imposed on purchases of a second category of articles those falling between the classification of necessities and luxuries. A 10 per cent tax would be paid on purchase of luxury items.

Amory estimated such a tax, similar to one now in operation in Great Britain, would yield $602,200,000 in additional revenue.

The witness said that house-approved increases in income taxes were "too sudden" and suggested that the total increase be limited to 40 per cent, instead of the projected 48 per cent. This would cut the yield from the house-approved income levies from $2,151,900,000 to $1,803,800,000 Amory estimated.

The witness also suggested that the income tax base be broadened, that rates be increased somewhat on incomes between $2,000 and $10,000. That liquor and tobacco taxes be further increased and that estate and gift taxes be retained at their present levels.

An outside limit of $4,000,000,000 was fixed for the new tax bill today by influential members of the Senate finance committee.

Secretary Morgenthau advised the committee last week that a $5,400,000,000 measure would be necessary if the treasury was to attain its financial goal of two-thirds revenue and one-third borrowing. Accordingly treasury experts now are working on plans to arise the $3,236,700,000 house-approved bill by $2,163,300,000.

Chairman George (D-Ga) predicted, however, that the senate finance committee would not add more than $500,000,000 to the house bill. He told reporters that the senate should pass a tax measure as soon as possible in order to save revenue which otherwise would be lost.

The treasury has estimated that the government is losing more than $2,000,000 a day through delay in enacting excise provisions of the pending revenue legislation.

Senator Brown (D-Mich), a member of the finance committee, informed reporters he hoped the tax measure could be increased "to an even four billion". Brown and George agreed that the bill could not go above that limit without seriously upsetting the national economy.

"I don't think we can go as far as Secretary Morgenthau would like us to go" Brown declared. "We can't possibly raise $5,400,000,000 at this session."

BLOW TO FALL AT ANY TIME

Reports Indicate Japan Mobilizing Powerful Force in Manchukuo for Possible Northern Campaign; Firmer National Policy Urged By Head of Famous Black Dragon Society

TO ACT IF EUROPEAN RUSSIA SHOWS BREAK

BY J. D. WHITE

Peiping, Aug. 11—(AP)—Observers in this north China gate to Manchukuo nad Mongolia expressed conviction today that Japan's next theater of action is more likely to be Siberia than Thailand—and that the blow may fall any day.

(In Shanghai foreign military sources agreed that Japan was mobilizing a powerful striking force in Manchukuo, but usually well informed quarters still believed Japan would act only if European Russia seemed about to collapse.)

Informed quarters expressed belife that August was the latest the Japanese could expect to launch a campaign into eastern Siberia without a winter stalemate.

Reports coming with travelers from the northeast added up to one thing: That something big was going on in Manchukuo.

Sifting the rumors, informed quarters were convinced Japan probably has amassed in Manchukuo at least as many troops as the Russians they would encounter in eastern Siberia.

The best available estimates here were that Russia still has a normal strength of 500,000 effectives in Siberia, including some mechanized units, while Japan probably has doubled the normal Kwantung army strength of 250,000—if not trebled it as some unconfirmed reports indicated.

Close analysts of Japanese policy held that the Japanese move into French Indo-China and reported pressure on Thailand to join the east Asiatic bloc were a priminary side-show to the main event, yet to come.

They pointed out that Japan, with two divisions in Indo-China, hardly would be likely to challenge the British to an actual test in Thailand.

These sources expressed belief that pressure on Thailand would go so far—short of war—and Jap-

Oklahoma Penitentiary Warden Is Victim of His Own Iron-Clad Rule

BY FRANCIS E. BARDEN

McAlester, Okla., Aug. 11—(AP)—An iron-clad rule he, himself, laid down several years ago, brought death to Warden Jess F. Dunn of the Oklahoma penitentiary and to two escaping convicts and a former prison guard in a brief but bloody Sunday break, the worst in three decades.

Several years ago Dunn told Bill Alexander, then a guard, "If there ever should be a break and the convicts get hostages, even if they get me and I tell you not to shoot, go ahead and shoot."

Alexander, now a deputy sheriff, remembered that admonition yesterday when he intercepted four, long-term prisoners who had seized the warden and a chance companion, J. H. Fentriss, in the prison yard yesterday.

The prisoners started shooting and Alexander shot back.

Dunn was the first victim. The enraged convicts shot him twice in the head and stabbed him through the heart.

Other dead:

Tab Ford, 52, former guard and former deputy who was in the sheriff's office when Alexander got the alarm and joined him in the chase.

Roy McGee, 36, serving 15 years for armed robbery.

Claude Beavers, 39, under sentence of 25 years for armed robbery and under a life term for a break in 1936 when Dunn led the posse which caught him.

Prison officials said he was the leader of both the 1936 uprising and that yesterday.

TWO INJURED IN AUTO COLLISION

Two persons, Mrs. Mildred Spangenberg and her small baby, were treated at the Warren General Hospital Sunday night for injuries received in an accident which occurred on the Russell-Scandia road.

Mrs. Spangenberg, wife of William Spangenberg, of 19 Langford street, Jamestown, N. Y., was treated for a leg injury and for brush burns about the face and shoulders. The child had similar face and shoulder injuries. Following treatment, they were taken to their home in Jamestown, neither being seriously injured.

The accident occurred when cars driven by Spangenberg and Ralph Swanson, of Russell R. D. 1, collided and the former's vehicle overturned. State motor police who investigated stated that Swanson will be charged with a violation of the motor vehicle code, since, it is said, he was driving without an operator's license.

and eight submarines. In the same period eight warships were launched, including the battleship South Dakota, third of the six new 35,000-tonners to hit the water.

The optimistic forecasts were hedged by navymen, however. With the proviso that no serious and lengthy labor difficulties develop. And it was noted that sudden involvement of this country in war would disrupt the program—Secretary of Navy Knox has declared "the first thing we could do" would be to suspend work on heavy units to free skilled workers for production of destroyers, submarines and planes which could be rushed into action with minimum delay.

served on authority boards and enabling municipal officers to legally serve on authorities; a bill defining unfair trade practices by setting a floor under retail and wholesale profits.

Thus far, there has been no indication from the governor as to how he will act on the measures.

Two meetings of interest to farmers will be held during the week. Thursday at Harrisburg, the State Milk Control Commission will hold a hearing on producer, wholesale and retail milk prices for Area 11. The area covers approximately four-fifths of the state, but only about 16 per cent of the population.

Tomorrow, county health officials plan to meet with Tom Williams, director of the bureau of vital statistics, to discuss new legislation affecting the issuance of birth certificates — now in heavy demand because of requirements of defense industries.

House Leaders Agree to Make Any Confession

(From Page One)

Washington, Aug. 11—(AP)—House administration leaders, faced with a stiff fight, decided today to make every concession necessary to obtain approval of legislation authorizing President Roosevelt to extend service for the rank and file of the army beyond the present statutory limits.

The first important votes on the bill were delayed at least until tomorrow, however, when Speaker Rayburn announced the House would meet only briefly and then adjourn out of respect to Rep. Albert G. Rutherford of Pennsylvania, who died yesterday.

Although the outlook was beset by some uncertainties, the Army meanwhile apparently had decided to count on ultimate passage of the measure and to risk its present troop dispositions accordingly.

General George C. Marshall, chief of staff, testified a month ago that if the bill did not pass by August 1 outpost garrisons would have to be impaired by the withdrawal of units containing men whose service was about to expire.

Officials said, however, that they knew of no orders relieving National Guard units in Hawaii which Marshall said would have to be issued by the August 1 deadline if these units were to be demobilized before expiration of their year's duty.

In the absence of an official explanation, it was assumed that the orders had been withheld in the expectation that the legislation, now close to a final vote in the House, would be approved shortly.

Hunt Jobs For Recipients of State Relief

make itself felt in a steady though as yet not large reduction in the number of persons receiving state aid.

It has been inaugurated by the county boards of assistance, made up of persons who know the residents of the community best.

What's happening is a new concept of the duties of a relief agency and here is how it works:

A local board calls in long-termers on the relief rolls, determines what has been preventing the wage earner of a case from obtaining a job and then charts a course to correct it. In many instances the trouble is a physical disability that can be corrected. The board sees that it is and as a result the person is able to leave relief rolls and accept employment.

To bolster the authority of the county boards to take such steps, sometimes at a cost of buying medical equipment for the reliefer, the 1941 legislature passed an enabling law and it recently was signed by Governor James. The act, generally, simply legislates the authority that the boards have been using anyway.

If no settlement is in sight by Wednesday night, the official said, it "is quite obvious that the Navy would have to take over management of the concern just as it would take over a picket line."

The dispute centers around a union shop demand by the CIO. The mediation board ... ed that the management agree to discharge employes who failed to maintain good standing in the union. The union accepted the recommendation but the company rejected it. The strike involves 17,000 workers.

William H. Davis, chairman of the mediation board, was expected back in Washington today, after cutting short a vacation on the Pacific coast.

Government representatives sought anxiously today to bring workers and management together in strikes which involve hundreds of millions of dollars in contracts for ships and airplane parts.

Still unsettled after a three day work stoppage was an AFL walkout at the Curtiss-Wright Company's propeller plant in Caldwell, N. J., which has more than $100,000,000 of defense orders.

Plant officials made no attempt to operate yesterday but said the plant was open and operating today. Jason Woodbury, president of the International Machinists of America local, claimed, however, that 950 of the plant's 1,000 production workers were on strike. He said only 50 of the 800-man day shift went through the picket line.

An increase from 2,908,506 in 1930 to 3,119,953 in 1940 was shown in Georgia's population by the recent census.

Inquiring Reporter Seeks Cause Hustle And Bustle In Community

The Inquiring Reporter has something on his mind.

What's all the rush about down in our press room?

What's all the rushing about of our Advertising Lady?

We tried to find out but to no avail. We walked into several stores and there we found a certain hustle and bustle, but when we asked "Why the rush?" they only asked us to "Hush" and perhaps tomorrow the cat would be out of the bag.

"Couldn't you give us a little inkling," said we.

"My no," said they. "You just wait and tomorrow you will find out. There's going to be big doings around this town the last of this week, and boy, oh boy . . . , well, now, we almost let that out."

Seeing we could find out not one thing, we came back to our office and asked our "Lady of the Ads."

Said she, "Oh, I mustn't tell you, but tomorrow you'll know."

"Tomorrow, Tuesday?" asked we.

"Yes," said she.

And so, my dear readers, tomorrow, Tuesday, we will have something of great importance to divulge to you.

ROYSTONE MAN SERIOUSLY HURT IN AUTO MISHAP

Struck by a car in Roystone shortly after one o'clock Sunday morning, Mike Miley, of that place, is in the Kane Community Hospital with injuries which may prove fatal.

Miley is suffering from fractures of both legs, severe brush burns and shock. At the Kane hospital today his condition was described as "poor."

According to state motor police from the local substation, Miley is alleged to have stepped in front of an automobile operated by Robert E. Flatt, 35, of 210 Walsh avenue, Kane, while the latter was driving east through Roystone.

It is believed that Miley either stepped out from another machine or started across the highway without making certain that traffic was clear. He was struck and thrown some distance.

Flatt stopped his car immediately, according to state motor police, possibly saving the life of Miley with first aid rendered before other help arrived.

Miley is reported to be employed at the Roystone pumping station.

FOURTH MAN IS HELD IN FRAUD AT SHEFFIELD

Sheffield, Aug. 11—The fourth and, officials believe, final member of the ring of conspirators which, through the medium of falsified weight slips for cullet glass sold to the company, defrauded the Pennsylvania Bottle Company here of several thousands of dollars was arrested Saturday.

Brought to Sheffield the same day by Secor, Doyle, who waived extradition, was arraigned before Justice Edwin Anderson here on a charge of "cheating by fraudulent pretenses." He pleaded guilty, and in default of $1,000 bond was committed to the Warren county jail.

The other three members of the ring, previously arrested on the same charge and now free on $1,000 bond each, are: John W. Hollis, Erie; Harry Nelson and James Suppa, both of Sheffield.

Man About Manhattan

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—For eye appeal, Xavier Cugat puts on a bang-up show. The Spaniard has a first class organization, with plenty of frills and maneuvers that mean absolutely nothing to the qualtiy of his music, but the spectators eat it up. Cugat now has monopolized interest at the Waldorf-Astoria for half a dozen years.

In winter, it is at the famed Sert Room, which probably is the nicest single room east of the Mississippi. And in summer, when the sidewalks broil and the nights are limpid and lackluster, it is at the Starlight Roof where Xavier and his fiddle, his frilly-shirted Cubans, his gourd thumpers and rhumba hounds do a brisk trade in entertaining the customers.

For one thing, there is always a breeze there, and whether it is artificial or not I have never been able to ascertain, but I do know that you come away with the impression that that breeze was put there just for you.

For another, the lights are just right, neither too dim nor too bright. For a third, Cugat himself is good company. He's a fine caricaturist, one of the best, and if anyone asks him for an autograph, he sketches a caricature of himself on a menu and presents it to you. At the moment Cugat is illustrating a book and he is working very hard at it. He does an illustration a day.

CUGAT also takes time out occasionally to rail (but good-naturedly) at swing bands who swing the congas and rhumbas.

In protest recently he made a conga out of the Hut-Sut Song. As Cugat plays it, the Hut-Sut now stands out like the imprint of lipstick on a bald head.

"After all," he says, "you've got to do something to get even with those guys."

The prettiest dancer I ever saw at the Starlight Roof was Loretta Young. She was dressed in something that was pale blue and she seemed to float on the air. The most enthusiastic American I ever saw there was Irving Berlin. The most gratifying sight I ever saw there was a filet mignon garnished with mushrooms and souffle potatoes. There I go again, thinking about food. . . .

Most of Cugat's friends call him Xavey. . . . He was born in Barcelona, drives a special-model car, and wears a beret. . . . He's a top-notch swimmer, and he has two brothers who are topnotch artists.

Cugat's love of caricaturing people about got him into trouble. . . . A woman sued him because she didn't like his pen and ink impressions of her. . . . But Cugat won the case. . . . Thursday's are busy days for him, because he rehearses all day, and goes on the air that night, in addition to his regular dancing stint. . . . He used to have 12 dogs but now has only two—a shepherd and a peke. . . . They live at the hotel with him. . . . In canine fancy, he follows no set breed All dogs are fine, he explains.

The color scheme in the fruit markets of 6th avenue is now plum and peach. . . . Meaning all those new shipments from California, Georgia and Florida are arriving. . . I have seen peaches in New York advertised for a dollar each. . . . But they were from South America, and were put out to attract idiots.

"HELPIN' BACK" SOLVES FARMER LABOR PROBLEM

"Helpin' back" is being resorted to by Pennsylvania farmers this year more than ever due to the shortage of farm labor, according to information received by James E. Walker, chairman of the AAA Defense Committee, now engaged in a statewide survey in an effort to determine the definite need of farm labor.

While it has long been a custom in Pennsylvania for farmers to "help back"—to cooperate in assisting their neighboring farmers to harvest their crops, reports indicate the extending of this custom to many communities this year in helping to solve the shortage of farm labor. In many cases, also, farm hands are being loaned to neighbors.

Cooperating with the AAA Defense Committee in the farm labor survey have been the State Employment Service, WPA, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Federal State Crop Reporting Service, Department of Public Assistance, and the local county committee of the Agricultural Conservation Bureau. Chairman Walker urges all farmers to fill in their farm labor survey form and return it to their county agricultural conservation office. This they are asked to do whether or not they are in need of farm help at the present time. This is essential to obtaining a complete picture of the farm labor situation in the state.

Preliminary figures, based on forms received from farmers in a portion of the counties and tabulated by the State Employment Service indicate a total of 8,000 harvest hands will be needed by Pennsylvania farmers, according to John S. Bleecker, field supervisor for the State Employment Service, and specially assigned to farm placement studies. The tabulated information received from farmers, Mr. Bleecker states, indicates that these 8,000 harvest hands will not all be needed at the same time, but will be spread out over the periods for harvesting various seasonal crops—grains, fruits and vegetables. Additional forms are yet to be received and tabulated.

Bleecker, likewise, urged all farmers to supply information to the county agricultural conservation committee in order that a clear picture of the farm labor situation may be obtained, not only for this year but for next year as well. He states that if the Employment Service has sufficient information as to how many farm workers will be needed and the time at which they will be needed, the service will be able better to supply workers at the proper time, if requested by farmers to do so.

WARREN COUNTY DIRECT RELIEF ROLLS DECLINE

While Pennsylvania's direct relief rolls turned upward for the second consecutive week, due to recent heavy cuts in WPA employment, Warren county reported a decrease of eight cases during the week ending August 2, according to information from the state public assistance department.

Warren county's decrease brought the total number of cases here down to 78, representing 104 persons. The drop was the result of closing eight cases, with none being opened. Six of the eight were attributed to gains in private employment.

Cost of relief in the county during the week was $225.

In the state there was a net increase of 1,324 cases during the week, bringing the total to 99,800 cases containing 208,919 persons. Cost of relief to the state was $525,894.92.

Following are the figures for some nearby counties:

Clarion—Cases, 247; decrease, 1; cost, $1,055.69.

Crawford—Cases, 306; decrease, 8; cost, $1,134.66.

Elk—Cases, 117; decrease, 4; cost, $492.17.

Erie—Cases, 596; decrease, 24; cost, $2,322.97.

Forest—Cases, 27; decrease, 2; cost $91.40.

McKean—Cases, 233; increase, 6; cost, $844.57.

Venango—Cases, 421; decrease, 4; cost, $1,546.66.

THE RECORD .... Facts That Concern You

A BAD ONE DOES TURN UP ONCE IN A WHILE!

Good weather and a bumper crop! Even then one finds a poor stalk once in a while.

The retailing of beer is something like that. Most beer retailers operate respectable law-abiding establishments. Occasionally one finds an exception—a man who tries to beat the law or who permits anti-social conditions.

The beer industry wants this type of undesirable retailer stamped out. Your cooperation will help us in our clean-up efforts.

The beer industry brings important benefits to the community. Here in Pennsylvania, beer provides employment for 73,372 persons, supports an annual payroll of $70,549,660 and contributed $7,183,635.63 last year in state taxes.

Pennsylvania, too, has an important stake in the beer industry's purchases—for materials, equipment, and services—from over 100 other industries.

You can help us protect these benefits in two ways. First—patronize only the reputable places where beer is sold. Second—report to the proper authorities any law violation you may observe.

SATISFACTION OF MORTGAGE

In the Court of Common Pleas of Warren County, Pennsylvania

No. 46, Sept. Term, 1941

In re:

Petition of Andrew P. Christensen and Mary E. Christensen for Satisfaction of Mortgage given by James Spoon and Bertha Spoon to Henry M. Ayling.

To Henry M. Ayling or his legal representatives, or whoever may be the holder or holders of the mortgage hereinafter mentioned.

Take notice that on August 4, 1941, Andrew P. Christensen and Mary E. Christensen presented their petition averring that they are the owners of the following real estate:

All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the Township of Columbus, County of Warren, and Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, bounded and described as follows, to-wit: Commencing at the southwest corner of land of Joshua Spoon, thence west to a post near the fence on the line between Oliver Casler and the heirs of George W. Carrier, deceased; thence westerly to the center of the road leading from Columbus to Spring Creek by Mead's mill; thence along the center of the road aforesaid to the west line of Joshua Spoon; thence along the said line one hundred (100) feet to the place of beginning, supposed to contain one acre of land, be the same more or less.

Also, one other piece or parcel of land situate in said Township of Columbus, bounded and described as follows, to-wit: Commencing at the northwest corner of lands of the heirs of John Carrier, deceased; thence west forty-two and one-tenth (42.1) rods to a post; thence south one degree west one hundred and fifty-four (154) rods to a post in Blanchard's north line; thence east by the same fifty-two and one-tenth (52.1) rods to a post, the south corner of said Carrier land; thence north one degree east along the said John Carrier's west line one hundred and fifty four (154) rods to the place of beginning, containing forty-one acres of land, be the same more or less.

That an unsatisfied mortgage upon said premises, given by James Spoon and Bertha Spoon to Henry M. Ayling, dated April 24th, 1900, due and payable five years after the date thereof, remains of record in the office of the Recorder of deeds for Warren County, Pennsylvania, in Mortgage Book Vol. 24, page 284, recorded May 31st, 1900, and that the period of twenty-one years has elapsed since the principal of said mortgage became due and payable, and no payment has been made on either principal or interest of said mortgage nor demand for the same within said period, and praying for satisfaction thereof.

Whereupon the said Court ordered that notice of the said facts be served by the Sheriff of Warren County, Pennsylvania, on whomever may be the known holder or holders of the said mortgage if to be found in the said county, and having known residences, and if not, then to give public notice by advertisement requiring them to appear in the said Court on Monday, the first day of September, 1941, at ten o'clock A. M., to answer the said petition and to show cause why the proper decree should not be granted, and the said mortgage satisfied of record.

STILL AN OBLIGATION

Even though National Chairman Thomas E. Dewey has announced that the goal for the United Service Organizations has been passed, that does not relieve Warren county from its obligation of endeavoring to raise its quota of $3,800. Cash contributions and checks are still acceptable and just by way of reminder H. B. Meacham, at the Warren National Bank, is treasurer.

The heartening thing about it is not that the goal should be exceeded—so great a country could scarcely fail to reach so small a goal, but in the large number of communities and people who gladly took part. It is like the aluminum collection. The amount of aluminum gathered up will not change greatly the situation, though every ton helps. But the millions of people who took part all showed their determination to back up the defense effort.

If it is decided that the national safety requires more than the present million and a half men in the Army, and requires that they serve longer, the USO campaign will have proved just a starter. But it is an encouraging starter.

REWARD FOR APPEASEMENT

Russia must be industriously kicking itself these days. In the 18 months just before Germany turned on the friend who had tried to appease her, Russia sent Germany a million tons of oil, including lubricants and aviation gasoline. That is a British estimate, and though Germany never got as much oil from Russia as she had hoped, there is no reason to doubt that she got that much.

Now that same aviation gasoline, or its equivalent, is being used to bomb Moscow; those same lubricants, or their equivalent, smooth the way for the panzer divisions in their drive on Kiev and Leningrad.

By the way, how are our own oil shipments to Japan going?

That concert by the Salvation Army band Sunday afternoon in General Joseph Warren Park was enjoyable in the simplicity of the numbers chosen on the program, although the more difficult pieces were played in a manner that was most commendable. Major Flinn and the staff are to be congratulated for the progress shown by this group of young musicians, many of whom left today for the Pittsburgh band camp.

An event that should not be overlooked by Warren citizens is the proposed road opening celebration in connection with the annual home coming at Enterprise Wednesday. That new highway between the Southwest township village and the Warren county line is one of the finest in the county. Would be a good idea for Warren to have a good-sized delegation on hand.

Reverent tribute to the memory of George W. Olmsted was the vesper service at Ludlow Sunday afternoon, inaugurated by Mr. Olmsted seven years ago. The beautiful weather added to the quiet solemnity of the evening, marking the program the most outstanding in the series yet held in the attractive Gardens.

A perfect week of August weather has been enjoyed, not only by vacationists, but all those whose vacation has not yet arrived. The week-end was particularly delightful, with the populace making the best of every moment. All nearby picnic grounds were filled to capacity Saturday and Sunday evenings.

Maybe it's just as well that Warren didn't secure that long-hoped-for swimming pool. They say down at Washington if the shortage of chlorine continues next year, for water purification, swimming pools may have to be closed down or their use restricted.

Better begin grooming those flowers for the annual Warren National Bank show, which will be here before you realize it.

Getting so you almost have to make a reservation for a table for Sunday morning breakfast in Washington Park.

If you gas before seven you won't be out before eleven!

The Crowded Capital

• EDSON'S WASHINGTON COLUMN •

BY PETER EDSON
Times-Mirror Washington Correspondent

Washington, Aug. 11—A manufacturer of steel penpoints who had gone out and done something about building up trade in his product with South America came to Washington not long ago with tears in his eyes as he told his sad story to anyone who would listen.

Here he had built up this trade, and he had customers all over Latin America using his brand of streamlined, ball bearing, knee-action, non-skid, ultra-modern pen that could write English, Spanish or Portuguese interchangeably and without shifting gears.

Then, along came the defense effort, and when Mr. Penpoint Manufacturer put in an order for a ton of stainless steel—one lousy ton, mind you—to make his scribblers for export, the defense people cracked down on him, said he was running a non-essential industry, and to go make pens out of old tin cans or any other kind of scrap he could find.

Mr. Penpoint Manufacturer started telling his story, not in those precise words, but to that general effect. Finally he found someone who would listen and who took his South America seriously, realizing that Made-in-U. S. A. penpoints were important in waging economic warfare. This party knew the right wires to pull and —P. S.—the manufacturer got the necessary preference rating and order for delivery of the ton of steel.

This parable of the penpoint priorities is mentioned as an example of the kind of thing that isn't going to be allowed to happen in the future, by reason of the setting up of new machinery which will take care of just such cases.

The job of seeing that the South Americans and all friendly foreign nations get what's coming to them, and that U. S. importers and exporters have no difficulty in getting the necessary priorities on supplies and shipping space has been given to the Division of Export Control, which is administered by General Russell L. Maxwell. Within the division, a new clearance section has been created, and it will be the duty of this section to see that justice is done, and in a hurry.

As matters stood before, half a dozen government agencies have their say-so on nearly every aspect of foreign commerce. The Department of State must determine if the exports or imports are in agreement with trade treaties, blacklists and embargoes. Army and Navy Munitions board must know if the deal complicates any defense work. Treasury must see that there is no violation of the frozen funds regulations. Maritime Commission must determine whether shipping space is available. Office of Production Management must make sure that priorities are not interfered with, and the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply must know the effect on U. S. non-military life. Department of Commerce must know all about foreign trade, and the Rockefeller Office of Inter-American Affairs is the friend in court of all the South American republics.

Under the old set-up, an exporter or importer wanting to get clearance had to see all of these departments separately. To say that what was left of U. S. foreign trade was rapidly being abandoned in the barbed-wire entanglements of all this red tape puts it mildly.

Under the new setup, all of these organizations will have a representative—a liaison officer—in General Maxwell's office. The eight agencies will then be able to put their OK or their NG on any of this business.

The relief of this simplified procedure to importers and exporters will obviously be tremendous. Taking the specific case of the penpoint manufacturer, all he will have to do when he wants his next ton of stainless steel is write to the clearance section, Division of Export Control, Washington, D. C.

He will get back an instruction sheet and the necessary forms. Properly filled out, these papers will go back to the Administrator of Export Control, and so fast are the wheels of the clearance section expected to be geared that the approvals and disapprovals will probably be ground out in a few days, instead of the weeks previously required.

Getting all this red tape smoothed out, by the way, is another one of the growing list of achievements of young Nelson Rockefeller. His division has been working on this problem for months, and finally put it over.

A Washington Daybook

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—In view of all the hullabaloo there has been about subversive elements in labor, it is surprising that there was no more comment on a measure which slipped through the House of Representatives in a move to clear the marine radio operators' union of subversive agents.

The so-called Bland bill (sponsored by Rep. Schuyler Otis Bland of Virginia, chairman of the House merchant marine and fisheries committee) would give the Federal Communications Commission the right to deny a radio operator's license to any person employed on a United States merchant marine vessel whose subversive activities are proved to the extent of "reasonable probability."

There are several important things about this bill:

1. Should it become a law, it might well be the pattern for other measures designed to weed the communists, bundists, and what-have-you from other fields of labor. Already several more such bills are being prepared in various committees.

2. Not a single dissenter rose against it in the House and it was given considerably more than lip service by such staunch friends of labor as Rep. Robert Ramspeck of Georgia and Jerry Voorhis of California. Ramspeck, in answer to a question on the floor, admitted that a representative of the C.I.O., with which the marine radio operators' union is affiliated, had asked him to oppose the bill, but said he had told him that he could no do so.

3. The bill defines a "subversive individual" as any one who believes in or advocates, or at any time has believed in or advocated "controlling, conducting, influencing, seizing, or overthrowing the Government of the United States by force, violence, military measures, or threats of any of the foregoing. . . . Who is, or at any time was, a member of, or who solicits or advocates membership in . . . the Communist party, the German-American Bund, the Young Communists league," or any other organization which believes in or teaches the tenets set forth. It doesn't take a Philadelphia lawyer to tell you that this covers a lot of territory, especially after the House committee added to it that a person is also guilty who "disseminates or distributes, or at any time has, etc., subversive propaganda."

4. According to Ramspeck, passage of the bill immediately would result in the revoking of licenses for about 150 of the 2,000 radio operators now employed by the merchant marine. These men would have the privilege of open hearings, but they would have to disprove evidence assembled against them by the army and navy intelligence services and the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

As an example of how some members of Congress feel about it, let's quote Ramspeck again. "I do not believe," he said, "it is in the interest of labor or anybody else in this country to have subversive individuals holding memberships in labor unions and in position to do damage to the welfare and safety of the United States of America and its merchant marine."

VOORHIS contributed this: "It has been my view all along that the kind of legislation that should be brought in the House is legislation that would attempt in a very careful and discriminating manner to separate the great rank and file of American labor from those elements that really make for trouble for the labor movement itself."

This may be only a straw in the wind, but insiders on Capitol Hill think it might also be a good-sized hunk of timber in building a foundation for a labor movement completely free of "fifth columnists." If this measure goes through the Senate without any serious blasts of opposition, the seamen may be next—and after that other labor groups involved in national defense.

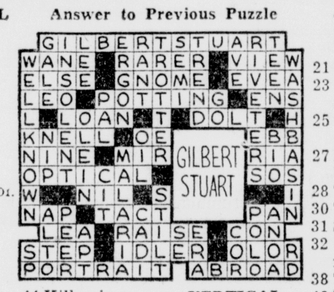

It may be that the "enemy of democracy" boys in the labor camps are in for a bit of legislated trouble.

"Now, listen, Miss Rogers!" There was a noticeable lack of affection in his attitude toward me. "If you know a better way, tell me. This case is a stone wall. Even Miss Blanton can't thelp me. We have one clue, Lee Gray. And even on that she can't give us anything."

"But really, I don't . . ." Carol began.

"You and I will discuss that later. And alone." He turned back to me. "Who knows if there'll be another attempt? If there is, it might be next Sunday or next year. Miss Blanton can't spend the rest of her life in hiding, can she? I don't say that anything will come of my boys tagging her. But if anyone behaves strangely, if somebody is too interested in her comings and goings, we'll know about it. Troy!"

"Yes, sir?"

"I don't mind you sticking your nose in the case. God knows we cops need all the help we can get. But I said help, not interference. If you know anything, or find out anything, you tell me. Quick."

"Of course."

"Yeah, but you won't. And you'll probably get hurt. But I'd be wasting my breath to warn you. Now, you take your girl for a walk. Miss Blanton and I want to be alone, don't we?"

Carol smiled and waved us away, but I thought I heard her catch her breath and saw her hands clench slightly as we closed the door.

Furious Actress

AT THE corner of Fifty-fourth and Lexington Jeff stopped. "What do you think the chances are of Bowers being in his office now?"

"Fair."

"Then we'll go see him first."

"First? Does that mean you're going detecting?"

Without even smiling modestly he nodded and we headed for the office in silence. We met Philip Ashley in front of the Colony Theater and the three of us turned down the alley together.

Inside the stuffy elevator I rummaged through my purse for my compact and lipstick. I would be stopping to powder my nose before venturing into a producer's office, I told myself ruefully, when I was ninety. A producer's office is a producer's office and it doesn't matter that you've got the job and played the part and it's over and done with. I snapped shut the enameled box and dropped it in my purse.

"It's fairly crass of me," Philip Ashley was saying, "to barge in on Clint at a time like this, I suppose, and to demand just what is what. But I thought it possible that he might want to close the show."

"Quite possible," Jeff said shortly.

Philip loosened the gay colored scarf that muffled his throat. "That's what I thought. Nevertheless, I have to know definitely in order to make my plans. I don't mind telling you that Hollywood's been after me for some time now. You know," he added warningly to me, "this isn't going to do any of us any good. Bad publicity. Very bad."

We stepped into the reception hall that fronted the office. It was empty, Phoebe's desk unopened and the door marked "Clinton Bowers—Private" closed. I put my hand on the knob but I didn't turn it. In the office someone was speaking and there was something in her tone that made us stop abruptly and look at each other.

"Please, please, Mr. Bowers," Alice McDonald was saying. She might have been reading for a part and overacting badly. "Let me try it. Just let me try it! You must know what it would mean to me! Oh, you've got to let me, you've got to give me this chance!"

"I'm sorry, Alice." Clinton Bowers' voice was very patient and very weary. "I have decided definitely to close the play at once. There will not be another performance of "Green Apples." That is final."

Anyone but the stage-crazed, thwarted girl that Alice was could have told he meant it. She said, "But, I . . ."

"This play is closing. No one is going to follow in the part that Eve North created here."

"Created!" Her voice exploded loud and scornfully. "Created! If you call mangling one of the most beautiful parts ever written creating! If you call babbling through it with a lot of tricks and phony mannerisms creating! No one's going to follow in her part, you'll see to that, won't you? Yes, you'll see to it all right and I know why, Mr. Clinton Bowers! Because any decent actress who followed in the part would show Eve North up too badly, wouldn't she? She'd show what a stinking sloppy mess she made of it! She'd show that your great Eve North was nothing but a ham, she's . . ."

"Alice!" His voice wasn't patient now; it was cold and threatening. "Get out of my office, Alice. Get out!"

His door swung open and we tried to look as though we were wending an uninterrupted way to the office, but I don't think Alice even saw us. She dashed straight into the elevator and the door slid quickly past her pale furious face.

CAPITAL GOSSIP

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—Only twice in the 71 years of the Department of Justice have there been such long periods as the present when the United States has had no Attorney General.

The reasons for President Grant's 56-day delay in filling the office and for President McKinley's waiting nearly six months to appoint a successor to Joseph McKenna are pretty much obscured in political history.

The reason for President Roosevelt's long delay in naming a successor to Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, whom he elevated to the United States Supreme Court, are almost as obscure — but not because there hasn't been plenty of speculation. Official Washington and the politicians have been wondering out loud, and 20,000 employes of the Justice Department have been parked on those proverbial pins and needles for weeks. Some are asking whether the appointment will affect their jobs. Others want to know how the new appointment will affect Department of Justice policies. The result: D. J. business has been almost at a standstill ever since Attorney General Jackson was appointed associate justice of the Supreme Court on June 12.

A Few Nuggets

TRYING to sift fact from rumor is a little like panning for gold where there isn't any—but there are a few nuggets worth considering.

For example, it is a foregone conclusion in most speculative circles that Francis Biddle, the deep-browed, mustachioed, tweedy Solicitor General will get the post and that Charles Fahy, his assistant, will be named Solicitor General. If such was preordained (and the Jackson appointment was so certain that it is impossible to conceive that his successor had not already been selected), why the delay?

Only two reasons have been advanced. One is that the President is waiting to see "how the administration will get along with Biddle." This is almost too silly to merit consideration. Biddle and the President were classmates, Groton and Harvard. And although Biddle wandered to the Bull Moose camp for Roosevelt I in 1912, he was well enough in line with the New Deal in 1936 to be chairman of the campaign speakers' committee. Although he is a little hard to tag in his political philosophy, as New Deal solicitor general he has batted .937 in successful handling of cases before the Supreme Court.

Maybe Murphy Wants It

THE second reason holds more water. That is, that the President has wavered before pressure groups seeking to swing the job to someone else. There is, for instance, Frank Murphy. The story goes that Murphy's 18 months on the Supreme Court have convinced him he wants no part of the quiet judicial life. He wants to be back in the thick of things. Both Murphy and Murphy's friends are believed to have been urging the President to return him to the post he once held.

Then there is Thurman Arnold, whose trust-busting has made him something more of a national figure than the Solicitor General.

And Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt, whose friends have been urging him to make a play for the post and undoubtedly speaking to the President in his behalf. It is known, however, that McNutt doesn't want the job. Although politically ambitious, McNutt is said to feel that his present job is a better one. The Attorney General may make the headlines much more frequently, but when he does, it must be in his capacity as prosecutor of the laws of the land — and prosecutors make enemies.

Two Versions

THERE the matter rests, with the President apparently waiting for two things: (1) To find a job for Associate Justice Murphy which he will like better than being on the Supreme Court or than again being attorney general, and (2) waiting for the pressure groups to get used to the idea that their men, for one reason or another, are not being considered.

Of course stranger things have happened in politics than a "slated" man (like Biddle) failing to get the job. Pressure groups sometimes do win out. The interesting thing is that only three times in 71 years has any similar situation caused the Department of Justice to go headless for so long.

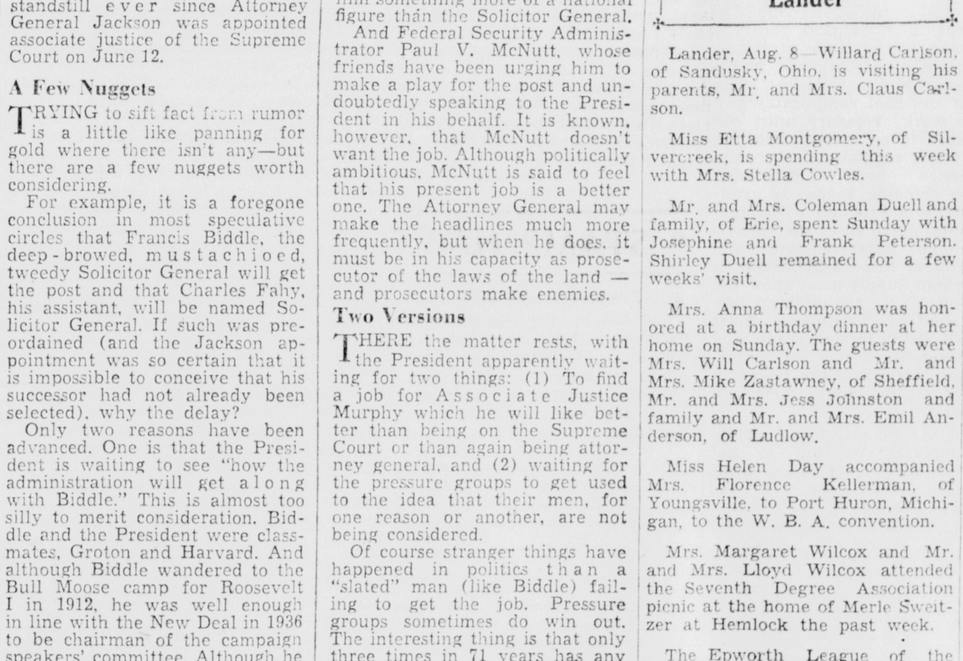

NOT ENOUGH

Apparently the large gill surfaces of a tarpon do not meet his oxygen requirements. He frequently rises to gulp air and stores it in a special tissue of his swim-bladder.

ELECTION ODDITY

The winning candidate received less than half the total popular vote in 12 presidential elections in the United States. In three, he received less than the opposing major party candidate.

Forsaken Fortress

Lone sentry and troop truck are only signs of life around Fort Weygand, Vichy French post in Syrian desert now held by British. Fort is apparently named for Gen. Maxime Weygand, currently conferring in Vichy on fate of French African colonies

USDA DEFENSE BOARDS NAMED BY STATE HEAD

The new United States Department of Agriculture State Defense Board for Pennsylvania, recently established by order of Secretary C. R. Wickard, held its organization meeting in Harrisburg last week. The meeting was called and presided over by James E. Walker, chairman of the State Agricultural Conservation Committee, who had been designated by the secretary to act as chairman of the newly created USDA Defense Board. Attending the meeting, in addition to Chairman Walker, were the following

Hugh S. Mackey, president, Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Baltimore, representing the Farm Credit Administration; E. L. Gasteiger, senior agricultural statistician, representing Agricultural Marketing Service; H. N. Reist, Pennsylvania State College, representing Agricultural Economics Extension; Carson F. Mertz, state director, Farm Security Administration; Harry O. Kimmel, state co-ordinator, Soil Conservation Service. Robert S. Einstein, chief educational section, AAA, Pennsylvania, was elected secretary.

The committee discussed the prospects for increases in certain commodities recently requested by the secretary and will report their findings to the secretary, together with recommendations for obtaining future increases. The increases requested involved certain vegetables for canning, pork, dairy and poultry products.

The membership of the defense board comprises a representative from each of the department agencies whose services will be called on by the secretary to administer actions necessary to carry out his departmental responsibilities in national defense.

Under directions of the secretary, the USDA State Defense boards are authorized to confer with, advise and arrange cooperation with other defense agencies having state or local offices, and to arrange for maximum cooperation of all departmental field personnel in these undertakings.

In each county in the state, a USDA County Defense Board has been established with the chairman of the county agricultural conservation committee designated as chairman. The other members of the county boards will comprise representatives of the various federal agencies who maintain organizations in the counties. The USDA County Defense Boards are responsible through their chairmen to the USDA State Defense Board.

River Barges Form "Rescue Fleet" To Aid the Gasoline-Hungry East

The Diesel towboat, St. Paul Socony, passing Chain of Rocks, above St. Louis, en route to Pittsburgh, pushing its recent record tow of 10,000 tons of gasoline. The tow, composed of eight barges, was two and a half blocks long.

By NEA Service

Pittsburgh, Aug. 11 — River barges which in recent years have placidly plied the muddy waters of the Mississippi in fewer and fewer numbers now are pouring oil from rich Gulf Coast oil fields on the troubled transportation problem of the East.

While unmoved oil accumulates in the Southwest for lack of coastwise ships, the U. S. has turned to its vast inland waterways system for the answer. Towboats and tank barges are taking petroleum products from Texas, through the Intracoastal Canal, up the Mississippi, through the upper Ohio Valley here to Pittsburgh, thence to help solve the looming oil shortage of the Northeastern and Middle Atlantic states.

The Diesel towboat St. Paul Socony is an example. It recently made what is probably the longest trip on record for a river towboat making one delivery when it traveled 4173 miles from Minneapolis to Beaumont, Tex., and back here with a cargo of petroleum. But barges from Texas usually travel through the Intracoastal Canal to the Mississippi, where they're taken up by another boat, then again transferred to still another anywhere from Memphis to Wheeling, W. Va.

Although barge traffic and oil cargoes on the waterways have immeasurably increased, if a proposed program goes through, the Mississippi will really become Oil Man River. The Mississippi River System Carriers' Association is making a survey for the OPM of all floating equipment to determine how river towboats can best aid in relieving the oil shortage in the East.

Barge building capacity is at present being fully utilized. But that capacity is only seven barges a month, and only 22 Mississippi River barges are under construction. There are two answers to this problem — additional yards could be provided, if barge and towboat builders received priority on steel and other material, and barges used in the past for other cargo could be converted into tankers. A number of barge owners have already asked the government's permission to do the latter. A bill pending in the House would help finance new river boats and barges.

Rivermen point out that there will be much less opportunity for sabotage if petroleum shipments are carried by rivers rather than concentrated in pipelines that would have to be patroled continuously. Even more important, they emphasize, is the fact that new barges could be built far sooner, with government aid, than pipelines could be completed. Pipelines, too, require a larger percentage of vital steel. Each river unit could go immediately into service, while the completion of an entire project would be necessary in the case of pipelines.

The size of tows used in moving gasoline and other commodities varies. Oil barges having a capacity of from 500 to 600 tons are most numerous in the oil-carrying trade. But most new barges have a capacity of approximately 1000 tons. A towboat may move 10 or more of these at one time on the lower Mississippi.

A record tow of 10,000 tons, or 3,500,000 gallons, of gasoline—equal to 400 average tank cars—was moved over the Chain of Rocks, bottleneck of the upper Mississippi River, this spring by the St. Paul Socony. The boat and tow of eight barges measured 927 feet, the length of two and one-half city blocks, or a parade of five old-time freight packets.

The botanical name of the true apple is malus malus.

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—They're going to make a movie out here from a script that was lived.

It's a simple script about a poor, rather puny little fellow, an American boy, who grew up into a tall, husky American hero and won fortune and fame and never let either turn his head. His name was Lou Gehrig.

Movie and baseball fans, and several producers, seem to have seen the possibilities in the script almost simultaneously. Samuel Goldwyn, as you know, has signed for the screen rights with Lou's pretty young widow, Eleanor Gehrig.

Mrs. Gehrig brought along her two gigantic scrap books, full record of an astonishing career from high school days to the tragic end.

"I don't know what the script will be," she says, "but I hope the story will be filmed as it actually happened—the story of an American boy.

MRS. GEHRIG wishes—and it is the producer's intention—to have the film the story of a life that happened to be lived in baseball rather than a baseball story. She hasn't any choice of an actor to play Lou, or an actress to play herself—though it's generally supposed that Gary Cooper, leaner than Gehrig was, will take the part.

Eleanor Gehrig, with her reminiscences, could almost write the scenario herself—this story of the son of immigrant parents, born in one of New York's poorest sections, under the clatter of the "L". The story of his early love for sports, counteracting his naturally delicate health, building up his body. High school days, and football at Columbia University, and the two years in the minor leagues and then the 14 years with the Yankees.

Boy meets Girl? It's perfect, just as it happened:

"I lived in Chicago and had seen him before, but I was a White Sox fan, and I remember rooting like everything for Lou Gehrig, Babe Ruth, and a few others to break a leg. Then we met and I became a Yankee fan. After we were engaged—it was the first all-star game in Chicago—I bought boxes for all my friends to see my hero play, my darling. He played. Somebody popped out a fly, and Lou missed it. Made the only error of the game and not a hit — my darling!..."

AND something about the western movie Lou made in Hollywood. "The Rawhider." "He'd never been on a horse in his life, but he loved it," she says. Colonel Ruppert (late owner of the Yankees) nearly died when he saw the picture, with all its stunting and wild riding—until Lou assured him it was done with doubles and he hadn't really risked his life..."

I hope they'll show Lou Gehrig cooking—his specialty, lobster saturated in New Orleans spices.

I know they'll show the way he was with youngsters who idolized him, and how he turned down small fortunes—when his creeping illness took him out of baseball—to take a $6,000 a year job as parole commissioner, working with youth.

They'll have a good movie if they merely follow the script that Lou Gehrig lived.

CIVILIANS WILL BE EMPLOYED IN ARMY POSITIONS

In line with the plan of the War Department throughout the country, Third Corps Area headquarters announced today a plan for giving certain jobs now held by soldiers in the corps area service command to civilian employes. The soldier released may be assigned to combat units or to act as instructors in the expanding army. This is another step toward increasing efficiency throughout the service.

An appropriation for this purpose was passed by Congress in the amount of $43,940,000 for the country as a whole. The present allotment to the Third Corps Area from this fund totals approximately $2,500,000.

Fort Belvoir, Carlisle Barracks, Fort Eustis, Indiantown Gap Military Reservation, Camp Lee, Fort Meade, and Fort Monroe will receive the largest proportion of this allotment. In addition to the allotment to the Third Corps Area, the exempted stations such as Langley Field, Aberdeen Proving Ground and Edgewood Arsenal will receive similar allotments.

It is expected that within the corps area approximately 3,500 soldiers will be replaced by civilians and that this will be in full operation by September 1st. A majority of such civilians will be drawn from eligible civil service lists.

The classification of workmen and artisans which will be needed for management and upkeep of posts, camps and other establishments of the Army are: operators of telephone, teletype and radio equipment; engineers, electricians, draftsmen, carpenters, blacksmiths, plumbers, steamfitters, machinists, sheet metal, leather and canvas workers; butchers, watchmen, janitors, firemen, and clerks.

Estimates of costs indicate that there are economic advantages also in this plan. A majority of the civilian employes will get about $1440 a year. Some in higher grades will receive an average salary of about $1510 a year. A comparative few will receive higher salaries. Among the men who will be replaced are master sergeants whose pay is approximately $1500 a year, which does not include allowances for food, clothing and medical attention. There will be a saving in the replacement of privates, too. Their upkeep ranges from $1700 to $2000 a year, excluding the cost of their equipment.

It was no surprise to me to find a pair of San Francisco players the international winners of the World Bridge Olympic. Robert P. Willson and George Gooden of San Francisco were the North-South winners of the Olympic this year.

This is a confirmation of what I told you in one of my earlier articles describing our transcontinental bridge tour—in my opinion, the caliber of bridge in San Francisco is higher on the average than I have found in any other section of the country.

Today's hand incorporates a difficult defensive play, but I am sure that if it were tested on a group of San Francisco players, all would make the correct play. West leads the seven of clubs as an exit, rightly fearing that a spade lead would give declarer his ninth trick.

South takes his ace of clubs and four diamonds. West discards the five of spades and East lets go his two fours. Declarer then cashes the queen of clubs and leads a small heart toward dummy.

West realizes that declarer, with eight top tricks, is probably planning to use the heart suit to force West in to lead spades. If West plays low, dummy will take the ace and lead another heart, and then no defense could stop game. But West forestalls the situation by playing the king of hearts, to leave himself two small hearts for exit. Now declarer cannot make the contract.

Local Citadel Sends Eleven Young People To Pittsburgh Camp

Eleven local Salvation Army boys and girls left this morning for the divisional corps cadet and band camp, to be conducted for ten days at the Army's fresh air camp at West View, near Pittsburgh.

Making up the Warren delegation were Edna Matha, euphonium player; Virginia Fellows, baritone; Iva Matha and Violet Fellows, altos; Virgil Fellows, bass; Leeil Matha, Charles Lucie and Bob Flinn, cornets; Betty and Beatrice Liberty and Betty Brown, additional cadets.

The curriculum will include Bible study, instrumental instruction and vocal harmony. There will be a recreational program that will include archery, mushball, swimming, tennis, hiking, various hobbies, campfires and other features.

The camp is under the direction of the young people's supervisor, Major Charles McNally, and instructors include several Pittsburgh staff leaders and authorities on musical themes from western Pennsylvania, who are volunteering their services for the camp period.

WHAT IS DISEASE?
B Spell it—"Dis-ease." A departure from ease or normal functioning, within the human body.

If your health is not all that it should be, have you given your Doctor a CHANCE to locate the trouble? Or have you expected him to read your mind or work miracles without your co-operation?

WHAT IS THE PRACTICE of MEDICINE?
C A search on the part of the specially trained individual (your Doctor) to find the cause of this DIS-ease. Then, the application of whatever seems best to REMOVE that cause.

Dodgers And Cards Sweep Bargain Bills In Senior Loop

Bucs Beaten Twice; Yankees Win Two As Tribe Falters Again

BY BILL BONI
Associated Press Sports Writer

Drama being somewhat outside this department's scope, there will be no effort made here today to tell you in glowing phrases of the history-making National League pennant race now in progress.

The drama, instead, will be left in the hands of the Brooklyn Dodgers and St. Louis Cardinals—and capable hands they are, too.

The facts are these—last Friday night Brooklyn was in front by three percentage points. Since then each team has played three contests. Yet today those same three points are all that separate the Dodgers in first place from the Cardinals in second.

This was achieved by a chain of circumstances which first saw the Boston Braves snap a seven-game Dodger winning streak on Saturday, and the Cardinals promptly lost a 13-inning thriller to the rambunctious Pittsburgh Pirates. Then yesterday there was a double victory for Brooklyn over the Braves, whereupon the Cards, already having won the opener of their doubleheader from Pittsburgh, broke loose with three runs in the eighth inning of the nightcap to take that as well.

In the first tilt, which almost broke into open warfare because the Dodgers felt Dick Errickson was trying to dust them off, Brooklyn pounded three pitchers for 17 hits, including four doubles and a homer by Ducky Medwick, for a 14-4 decision. The nightcap saw Stout Frederick Fitzsimmons and his knuckleball shut out the Braves 4-0, on six hits.

A crowd of 26,513, one of the year's largest in St. Louis, saw Ernie White take the opener, 3-2, for his 14th decision as Terry Moore's pinch-single drove in the deciding runs, and then watched Mort Cooper, though touched for 10 safeties, bear down in the clutch to win his 10th of the year.

Not only was this the first time the hopeful Pirates had lost two straight in the space of three weeks, but it dropped them nine and a half games off the pace.

The baseball tradition that it's bad luck to get presents held true for the Chicago Cubs' Charley Root. The 42-year-old veteran got a station wagon from his fans, a $1,600 check from his club and even a baby pig. But when he settled down to work he got a 3-1 trimming from the Cincinnati Reds whose Johnny Vander Meer was in seven-hit form.

The New York Giants ran the last-place Phillie's losing streak to eight in a row by winning the first half of their double bill, 5-4, getting four runs on homers. But then the Terrymen, riding a three-game victory string that was their longest since June, rode it to a fall as Veteran Si Johnson turned them back, 4-3.

In the American League the New York Yankees took two from the Philadelphia Athletics, 11-2 and 4-1, and thereby climbed back into a 14-game lead over Cleveland. The Indians helped things along by bowing to Ted Lyons and Thornton Lee of the Chicago White Sox, who held them to six hits apiece in winning by 5-2 and 2-1 respectively.

The Boston Red Sox were their slugging selves in trimming the Washington Senators, 7-6, but in the nightcap couldn't bunch their 10 hits off Venezuelan Alejandro Carrasquel, who chalked up an 8-2 triumph.

Buck Newsom, of the Detroit Tigers, who hasn't won a game since July 15, didn't win one yesterday, either. The St. Louis Browns got to him early for nine hits in four innings, got six more off Schoolboy Rowe, and won, 7-3.

CLAWSON HURLS TWIN TRIUMPHS FOR HOSPITAL

A confliction of dates left the State Hospital in a predicament last Saturday with two opponents for their weekly date at the North Warren diamond. So, not having any other solution, they played both and added two decisions to the right side of the ledger.

The first victims were the Jamestown Vikings, who lost by a score of 10 to 5 in a seven inning game. Next, a combination of Marconi and Eagle players dropped a five inning encounter which no one cares to write home about by a 9 to 3 count.

Chuck (Dipsey-Doodle) Clawson pulled the old "iron man" stunt out of the bag and tossed both games, twelve innings of ball over which route he displayed his goods which are ample as to pitching possibilities.

Clawson won the above "nickie" with nine strikeouts in the first game and five more in the second for a total of fourteen to show for the day's work.

Harold Brown, who with Clawson forms Warren's popular baseball twins, walloped a home run in the first encounter scoring two runs and aiding the Swansonmen in their rout of the Jamestown club.

Home On the Range With Seabiscuit

Owner Charles S. Howard saddles Seabiscuit for workout on ranch near Willits, Cal., where turf's greatest money winner is in stud. Daily exercise keeps the racing immortal in condition.

It's been quite a spell since this community has produced any ball players who even hint that that they may be big league material some day, but this day and age finds us with a couple more who may be added to the past greats in this section in a few years to come. Now, we don't pretend to be experts as scouts for big league ivory, but when we see a nice red apple among some that are still slightly green, we know which one to eat. And so with the present crop of ball players in this community we have a knowledge as to which are the cream and which are only average baseball players. The two current candidates for big league recognition in a few years are Harold "Buster" Brown and Charles "Gabby" Clawson, with possibly "Monk" Murphy, North Warren lad, having a good chance also. The two former boys seem set to play some kind of minor league ball next year, for they'd be a cinch to grab places in the lineup of any PONY League club. Personally, we feel they're too fast for the PONY Leaguers and would be willing to bet they could bid for and win a position on many Class C teams of today, with their current experience.

Murphy is right behind them. In fact, he's right with them most of the time, and hasn't played before this year, whereas both of the other two had high school experience. And "Monk" is the nicest looking youngster on third base this observer has noticed in the past five years. When he goes into the dirt for a grounder, no matter what kind of hit, the chances are that "Monk" throws the batter out at first. He seldom makes an error and his steady batting (he owns a keen batting eye) makes him a value man who will be even better with another year or two of seasoning. This corner's unbiased opinion, though maybe it isn't asked for, is that any of these three kids would be worth the gamble of at least a season for any major league club. What's more, this writer believes that at least one will some day play major league ball. Unlike Morrison and Elmo Wolfe when their breaks finally came around, and unlike, too, Gerry Giegerich, who now we doubt will ever hit the big time, these three lads have the advantage of being heard about before hitting twenty. Brown is only nineteen, and he just turned that. The other two gladiators won't be nineteen until late this year. So two years of experience will still leave them young and ready for a long major league career, which, as we said, at least one of them should earn in time.

Just off the grid-dle . . . It's time we made personal mention of the change in coaching personnel in this section in our daily blatter . . . So as to Benton Kribbs leaving Youngsville High, we hate to see you leave, pal, but good luck in your new job as teacher in the Otto township school . . . and also the best of the same to your successor, Harry F. Stockdale, former star at Slippery Rock and Duke University and ex-coach at South Park, Pa., High School . . . And then there's Oil City High School's Mike Ferrare, who didn't have a chance to show his real wares at that town in the last two seasons as head coach, mainly because of insufficient grid material, but now should really come into his own at Erie East, where he will take over the head coaching duties . . . he's going home, for Mike was born in the lake port . . . Better fortunes ahead for you, Michael . . . And now, since we're well-wishing all football mentors in this breeze, the same to our own "Jake" Leidig and to Doc Reese, who'll be coaching the high school and Red Jacket elevens, respectively, in this community this autumn.

LUDLOW BLANKS EAGLES AGAIN BY 2-0 SCORE

A three hit shutout was too much for the Warren Eagles in a weekend battle with the Ludlow Wildcats at Ludlow and they lost a 2 to 0 decision over a seven inning route.

Larry Anderson, seventeen year-old youngster headed for the PONY League next season, did the tossing. He fanned ten batters over the distance. Earlier in the season in scoring a 3-0 conquest over the Eagles, Anderson whiffed a third strike past seventeen batters.

A fluke home run jarred the Eagles pitcher who only gave up five hits in the encounter, but blasted him for one of two runs, the other tally following shortly afterward.

Harampolis, Ludlow shortstop, hit a liner that fell safely just beyond third base in the last of the sixth inning. It bounded foul and into a stream which runs along the park, and with no ground rules covering such a play, went for a home run.

A triple was gained in a similar manner by Pochatko out along the first base line, and he scored on a pop foul which Baker caught along the third base line.

Forgers Beaten 4-3 By Mike Cannavino's Meadville Pioneers

The Meadville Pioneers pushed a run over in the top half of the seventh inning yesterday afternoon at Irvine to whip the National Forge 4 to 3 after a nip and tuck ball game over the first six cantos.

The Forge jumped off to a one-run lead in the first inning, but the Pioneers took the lead with two in the second.

In the third, the Forgers tied it up with another counter, only to have their visitors come back in the fourth with another score.

Then in the sixth, the losers scored again to force another deadlock but the Pioneers cashed in with the payoff tally in the seventh frame.

"Red" Hajnik and "Emmy" Morrison were effective at bat with two hits apiece in five times at the plate. Dick Giegerich was the real pacer, however, with two in four attempts.

Only Freddie Gagliardi's triple in the eighth inning was a smack that earned extra bases for any batsman in the game.

Tomorrow night the two teams go at it again at Meadville, the fracas slated to start at 8:15 o'clock.

Next Sunday's game at Wilder Field now is undecided, the Celtics may not be here, but another strong club is lined up to replace them in any event the Akron outfit can't make the date.

Sports Round-up

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, Jr.
(Pinch Hitting for Eddie Brietz)

New York, Aug. 11. (The Special News Service)—Week's wash: Best reading we've seen in some time is the "Upton Nooz," doughboy paper from Camp Upton, N. Y . . . Leo Waldman, former N. Y. Herald-Tribune writer, does the sports editing and reports the Upton ball team is so hot the local folks call 'em "Senior Dodgers" . . . Frank Leahy came right out in public at the Texas High School Football Coaches Association meeting and told them material counts more than anything else in their business . . . And don't you think the listeners didn't believe him, what with all the coaches in the state around to get a look at the kids playing in the All-Star game . . . A dozen of the All-Stars are headed for Texas A. and M. this fall and 10 for Rice . . . The U. S. G. A. finally has decided that golfers know enough to come in out of the rain . . . The Association just passed a rule that when tournament players think there's danger of being hit by lightning they can stop without waiting for a signal from the tournament committee.

Midwestern harness fans better get a look at Bill Gallon, the Hambletonian winner, while they have a chance. His owner let most of the colt's three-year-old engagements lapse when he didn't show much early speed, so from now on he'll have to race against the crack older horses or not at all . . . Giant fans (yes, there still are some) agree with Horace Stoneham in stringing along with Bill Terry as manager, but they say Horace should get himself a new club for Bill to manage . . . Alice Marble and her coach, Eleanor Tennant, expect to get a sponsor soon for a proposed radio program. Eleanor will talk about tennis. Alice, you know, can sing but we'd rather watch her make court opponents moan . . . Will Lou Nova be Joe Louis' successor as champion? Well, he was once. He took the National A. A. U. title right after Joe held it.

Money Isn't Everything

We hear that Greenberg got a raise
And now collects a Corporal's pay.
And after getting fifty grand
It likely seems like so much hay.

Until the army takes Bob Feller.

Sportpourri

The Dodgers are going to throw a "night" Wednesday for Red Barber, who airs their games . . . Paul Brown, the Ohio State coach, has registered at the Northwestern football coaching school, where Michigan's Fritz Crisler is a prof. . . All Brown wants to learn is how to beat Michigan . . . Danny MacFayden and Shanty Hogan are two of the applicants for the job of managing the Hartford Eastern League club . . . Diz Dean, who's never been anything but a Gashouser at heart, picks the Cards to win the National League pennant . . . Detroit should be a red-hot sports town this winter, due to the cash rolling in from the defense program. The football Lions already have a $40,000 advance sale and Jack Adams has been around predicting a whale of a hockey season.

Eight Grid Contests Carded at Smethport

Smethport, Aug. 9—The following football schedule for the 1941 season has been released by Harry Schmidt, athletic director of the Smethport High School:

Sept. 6—Alumni (H).
Sept. 13—Otto—(A).
Sept. 20—Port Allegany (A).
Oct. 4—Bradford J. V.'s—(H).
Oct. 11—Coudersport (A).
Oct. 18—Coudersport (H).
Nov. 1—Otto—(H).
Nov. 11—(Tuesday—Port Allegany (H).

Coach Schmidt stated that only four lettermen will be available from last year's squad. They are: Mel Lemon and Ralph Scowden, seniors; and Hanford Johnson and Glen Mencer, juniors. However, he reported that he has a promising group of candidates in Bill Lemon, Leonard Slocum, John Maynard, George Thompson, George Bermender, Ed Head, Fred Burlingame, Bill Potter and Dick Carlson, with which to round out a starting lineup.

It is expected that with the consolidation of Norwich Township High School with the local school many boys will be anxious to play football this year.

MEETING TONIGHT

All Church League managers are requested to be on hand for a meeting tonight at the Y. M. C. A. at 8:30 o'clock. The meeting won't be long, but is important and all pilots are asked to be present.

Correspondent Tells of Visit to German-Captured City of Smolensk

revealed that Stalin's scorched earth program was only partly successful here.

Minsk and Vitebsk, over which the plane flew low, appeared desolate—but not to the extent of Smolensk.

In between, however, hundreds of straw-thatched villages, dark spots in a yellow ccuntryside, for the most part seemed untouched. The war apparently had swept past them, dealing the more destructive blows to the larger communities.

Here and there could be seen the blackened ruins of villages. In one case a whole community of about 60 houses was burning briskly as we flew over.

Even in such cases, however, villages remained nearby.

Between these villages stretched rye and wheat fields gleaming golden in the sun. The crops were not destroyed. They were too green to burn as the time the Russians withdrew from the Smolensk area. Now much of the grain has been harvested. Large numbers of persons were seen at work in the fields—many of them women, barefoot, brown and husky—who toiled on, paying little heed to soldiers or the war.

In its Sunday communique dealing with activity on the eastern front, the high command reverted to the brief phrase: "Operations in the east are proceeding according to plan." At the same time it said more than 10,000 Russian planes were destroyed, including those on the Finnish front, since the war with Russia began June 22.

tars, 31 light machine guns, six anti-tank guns, 10 automobiles and several motorcycles.

Moscow's civilian casualties mounted as several waves of German planes attacked overnight in the 16th raid on the Soviet capital. Incendiaries touched off fires in the ruin of dwellings smashed by high explosives.

The Russians reported that, like the night before, only a few of the raiders broke through the city's defenses of anti-aircraft fire and night fighters. Five raiders were reported downed last night during the alarm which lasted four hours and 15 minutes, and 10 in the mass raid Saturday night.

(DNB said nearly 100 planes attacked the Soviet capital Saturday night, showering the city with thousands of incendiaries and scoring a direct hit on the Kremlin with one big bomb.)

Pravda, Communist party organ, commented during the weekend that the German armies "have not yet lost their power of advance," but Russian commentators declared the Red army still could cope with all the blitzkrieg the Germans have left.

Russian frontline forces already were reported bolstered by growing forces of the peoples' army called to arms by Premier Joseph Stalin July 3.

The semi-monthly publication Bolshevik declared yesterday that tens of thousands of other civilians in the Moscow area were being taught street fighting with grenades, rifles and bayonets.

an would consolidate her southern flank, then turn northward.

Some of these quarters, especially Chinese, said they believed Japan now may think it best to consolidate her hand throughout Asia wherever possible. This, they said, would point toward an attack on Siberia rather than creating further conditions for a southern Pacific break with Britain if not with the United States.

There were reports that Mitsuru Toyama, head of Japan's famous Black Dragon Society, and other influential secret society leaders again were putting pressure on the government for a firmer national policy.

While opinion originally was that Japan would await a decisive defeat of the Russian army by the Germans, it now was believed that she has waited only to bring feverish preparations throughout Japan, Manchukuo and North China to completion.

Wall Street, a bit weary, had to make two trips to carry his suitcase, a basket and two red twine bags to the car. The chauffeur, looking ill at ease as Whitney trudged painfully up with the heavy suitcase, was not permitted to enter the prison gates to help.

As he left, he was given a pair of gold cuff links taken from him when he entered April 12, 1938. He declined the state's customary offer of a new suit, but accepted $192.86 in cash. This represented $163.36 in prison pay, $9.50 of his personal money and the state's rehabilitation fee, which he thriftily took.

Since he had $11.85 when he first entered the prison, he left $181.01 richer.

As for Nazi utilization of bases on the coast of Africa, President Roosevelt on May 27 specifically mentioned French Dakar among other bases when he spoke of "the vital importance of keeping Hitlerism away from any point in the world which could be used and would be used as a base of attack against the Americas."

When he said that attack on the United States could begin with domination of any base which menaced our security, he declared "we will not hesitate to use our armed forces to repel attack."

Old Age And Survivors Insurance Payments Increase in Pennsylvania

Philadelphia, Aug. 7—Monthly old-age and survivors insurance payments in Pennsylvania increased more than 25 percent during the first three months of 1941, both in the number of recipients and in the amount of money, it was announced today by William L. Dill, regional director of the Social Security Board.

At the end of March, 32,865 men, women and children were receiving monthly checks which amounted to $607,707, it was revealed by figures just tabulated. This, Mr. Dill pointed out, was at the rate of $7,292,000 a year.

The figures relate only to the all-federal family insurance plan and do not include allowances under any of the federal-state public assistance programs.

While gains were registered in all six types of monthly payments, exceptional increases were made in payments to widows. A 63 percent rise was recorded in payments to widows above 65, who are not required to have dependent children in order to be eligible. Monthly checks were sent in March to widows with dependent children was revealed. These payments are made regardless of the widow's age. The March checks amounted to $162,994 for 3,221 such widows.

Mr. Dill explained that the increase in claims from aged widows is at least partly attributable to the beneficient operation of a 1939 amendment which permits workers to become fully insured after they attain age 65.

For the first time since monthly benefits became payable at the start of 1940, the number of retired workers fell below 50 percent of the total. In March, 16,038 retired workers drew checks for $369,854. Increased employment opportunities have curtailed retirement of aged men considerably, Mr. Dill said, and, in fact, have caused many retired workers to leave the benefit rolls and return to work in defense and related employment. When they cease work again, their monthly benefits will be resumed.

More than one-fourth of the retired workers had wives about age 65 who receive each month, one-half as much as the primary beneficiary. There were 4,547 such wives on the benefit rolls during March and their payments amounted to $55,123.

Monthly payments to dependent children of deceased or retired workers increased one-third during the three-months period, with 8,101 recipients receiving $100,938 a month.

While insurance payments are made to aged parents only in cases where they were dependent upon an insured worker who died, and then only if the worker left no widow or dependent child, payments in this category were made to 114 persons and amounted to $1,518 in March.

In virtually all cases where an insured worker dies without leaving a survivor who is entitled emmediately to monthly checks, a lump sum benefit is paid. In many cases such payments are made to widows without children before they reach age 65, and monthly payments are begun when the widow becomes 65, Mr. Dill said.

"The spread of benefits in Pennsylvania has reached proportions that compel recognition of the fact that the Old-Age and Survivors Insurance program offers substantial protection to the entire family against the hazards of old-age and death", Mr. Dill said. "Not only is this program enabling many persons to leave the public assistance rolls of the State, but it is enabling many others to avoid acceptance of public charity and is holding together many families that otherwise might be separated when death removes the breadwinner."

MADE UP TO KILL

Chapter 14

This Murder

BOWERS hadn't risen from his desk. He sat hunched over the disorderly mass of papers, his head bowed in his hands. When he lifted his face to us, I was shocked at its gray haggardness. Philip coughed a forced, stagy cough.

"We . . . we couldn't help overhearing, Clint. 'Green Apples' is closing then?"

Bowers nodded. "Yes. Definitely."

"Then . . . I suppose it will be all right for me to accept any offer that might come my way? I'm considering Hollywood."

"It'll be all right so far as I'm concerned. The police, however . . ."

Ashley smiled a sort of grave amusement. "I hardly think there will be any difficulty there. After all, my long record on the American stage . . ."

"Your long record on the American stage!" I repeated indignantly. His calm assurance made me sick at my stomach. "What's that got to do with whether or not you tried to kill Carol?"

"Relax, Haila." Jeff put his hand on my shoulder.

"It's quite all right," Ashley said, oozing with patronage. "We're all horribly upset and overwrought. It's been a frightful experience, this . . . this . . ."

"This murder," Bowers said quietly.

We had all been chanting "Murder" for the past twenty-four hours. It had become the prime word in our vocabularies and had almost lost any connotation. But when Bowers said it now, so quietly and bluntly, it found its place again, and Eve's horrible dead body and Carol's scared white face were with us in the room.

Jeff moved uneasily. "I'm afraid I didn't exactly live up to my recommendation of myself."

"No," Bowers said. "You couldn't help it. Don't blame yourself, Jeff. I asked you to watch Carol."

"I might have watched . . . a little further."

"You couldn't know that Eve would pick up Carol's cape and stand there, where in a minute Carol would be standing, looking like Carol. . . ."

"Madness," Ashley said.

"Eve didn't think. She needed something to cover her scars, and she took the first thing she could find. She didn't think about murder; she thought about her entrance. Eve was like that. No, Jeff, there was nothing anybody could have done."

"Darling, you did your best," he said. "Clint knows that. Why, even Peterson couldn't prevent it."

"My responsibility was greater than his. He was doing a job that had been assigned. It was routine for him. I was trying to do a job that I'd made for myself. And I failed." He stopped and took a deep breath. "Well, the point is, I'm going on. And you can forget that money was ever mentioned yesterday, Clint."

Bowers looked at him for a long moment. "We won't forget anything, Jeff. Since last night . . . since Eve . . ." He swung his chair around so that his face was turned from us.

No one spoke. It was as though all of us were searching our minds for the right thing to say and there was no right thing. At last Philip coughed again and stood up.

"It's a beastly business. I wish there were something I could do. I know there isn't. Just . . . if ever you have anything for me again, Clint, I'd consider it a privilege to play for you."

"If ever I produce again."

"But of course you will! And soon, old man, very soon." Philip patted him on the shoulder.

"Without Eve? I haven't produced a play in five years without Eve. No play comes into this office except some agent thinks there is an Eve North part in it." He wasn't talking to us; he was thinking out loud. "I've built every production around her. Everyone in the cast a contrast to her. Every set a background for her. I . . . I wouldn't know how to go about producing without Eve."

Once More, Lee Gray

HE STOPPED and his eyes, soft and sad, turned bitter. He stared unseeingly at the sheaf of papers on his desk. We made mumbled exits that Bowers scarcely noticed.

I walked between Jeff and Ashley up to Broadway, breathing the crisp air gustily as though I might expel with it the tragic atmosphere of that office over the Colony. Philip was going on again at greater length to explain how Eve's murder was inconveniencing him personally. At Times Square a delivery truck pulled up to a kiosk and dumped a bundle of papers. I slipped away and bought one to see what was being said about the case. Jeff flicked the front section from me. I turned to the theatrical pages while Philip droned away, seemingly unaware of our lack of attention.

In the notes of coming productions I saw something that made me gulp in astonishment, and it was a minute before I could collect enough breath to speak.

"Jeff! Jeff, listen to this! 'For his next production "Though Heavens Fall," Vincent Parker has engaged Morgan Thomsand, Marge Flint and . . . and Lee Gray.'"

Jeff ripped the paper from my hand. I pointed to the item and he read it aloud as if he expected the name, if it had been there at all, to be gone by now. ". . . Morgan Thomsand, Marge Flint and Lee Gray. Haila, who is Vincent Parker? Does he have an office? Where is it?"

"It's in Radio City. I know him."

"C'mon," Jeff said, "let's get moving."

"Just a second." Ashley put his hand on Jeff's arm. "Are you . . . are you going to Parker's office now? Immediately?"

"Sooner than that. C'mon, Ashley, walk up with us."

"No, thanks. I wouldn't be seen in Parker's office. I couldn't afford to. Besides, I've a terribly important appointment downtown."

"Wall Street, no doubt," I said maliciously.

"As a matter of fact, it is Wall Street. Taxi!"

Ashley stepped into his cab and I had to run to catch up with Jeff who was halfway across Broadway by that time.

On Sixth Avenue he didn't even stop, as he usually did, to make sure the khaki colored men digging the new subway were getting along all right. Breathless, I grabbed his arm and pulled myself abreast of him. "Jeff . . ."

Jeff snorted and two middle-aged women gaped at me. Automatically, I still raised my voice to a shriek on Sixth Avenue to combat the roar of the El trains that were no longer extant.

I tried again, in a softer tone. "Jeff, shouldn't Peterson know about this?"

"He probably does. Save your air. We should've taken a cab."

Mr. Parker

AT RADIO CITY we took one of those rocket ships they call express elevators and I answered the operator's questioning look. "Sixty-two." He punched the button with a flip of his knuckle and leaned back against the wall, waiting for the car to fill. When he had become convinced that no one would ride in the same elevator with Jeff and me, he took off for the sixty-second floor.

The doors slid open and we stepped out. Jeff started to say something, then stopped. I glanced in the direction he was staring. Backing slowly into the next car, while the crowd settled in the rear, was Philip Ashley. The doors closed. It was impossible for Ashley not to have seen us, but his eyes gave no flicker of recognition. His face was dead pan.

"Well," I said, "so this is Wall Street."

"Yeah."

"But why should he do that?"

"Maybe he wanted to find out about Lee Gray before we did. We'll see."

Parker's secretary announced me over the telephone without first asking my name. That made me feel fine and smug. That girl and her colleagues had almost nipped my theatrical career in the bud until one day I had managed to slip past her, and Vincent Parker had given me my first part in New York.

Mr. Parker would see me in a few minutes. In answer to Jeff's question, the secretary told him that Philip Ashley had not been in to see Parker within the last few minutes or, as far as she knew, ever. Jeff sat down beside me.

"Haila," he said, "let me do the talking about L. G."

Vincent Parker opened his door and beckoned to me. He looked like five and a half feet of rainbow with his dark-blue shirt, yellow knitted tie, brown tweed suit and very conservative battleship gray spats. His face split in a grin that shook his ears. When Jeff followed me into the office he flattered me by looking disappointed that I wasn't alone.

"She's my girl," Jeff explained. "I never leave her alone with strange men."

"If you think I'm strange you oughta see my brother!" Parker said. When he had stopped laughing I introduced Jeff to him and we seated ourselves, Parker behind his huge, streamlined desk, Jeff and I on a luxurious divan that Vincent must have bought secondhand from some insolvent Caliph.

"Nicely appointed chamber," Jeff said. He had nearly broken my neck to get us up here and now he was being the suave, casual Philo Vance type. "Who decorated your office? Billy Rose?"

"Billy Rose? Naw. Great little fellow, though. I knew Billy when he was shorthand champion of the world. Billy thinks a lot of me and I've always admired him, too."

"I understand you're going to do a play, Mr. Parker," I said, trying to get Jeff to the point.

"When you call me Mr. Parker, Haila, I don't know to who you are referring. The first name is Vincent. It ain't as if we were mere acquaintances. I give you your start on Broadway. Tell me if I'm wrong."

"Vincent," I blurted, "who is Lee Gray? What is she, where is she?"

Parker beamed. "You want to know, too, huh?"

"Too!" Jeff barked. "Who else has been asking?"

"The cops. One of the drama-page boys on the Post tipped them off when he seen my press release. I figured it would raise plenty of comment."

"Well, who is Lee Gray?"

"Frankly, Haila, I don't know."

Threat to Singapore Seen Endangering Philippines

By THOMAS M. JOHNSON
NEA Service Military Writer

Washington, Aug. 11.—Japan's demand for bases in Thailand points a loaded gun at Singapore. The threat to the great British naval base is obvious. What few Americans realize is that the threat to us is just as great if we intend to defend the Philippines.

Except for Singapore (it is an open secret that Britain has promised us use of this great naval base), we have no fleet operating base in the whole Far East. Cavite and Olongapo—thanks to arms limitation treaties—lack adequate facilities, notably drydocks.

A fleet can operate only 2500 miles from base. To fight in the Philippines, ships of our Pacific Fleet must first traipse out from Hawaii and then, if injured, limp back through a Pacific infested with islands we let Japan keep in 1919. It would be well over 5000 miles out and 5000 back. The Japanese Fleet has only a fifth as far to travel to reach Manila.

But from Singapore, a harbor which can hold and service the world's navies, to the Philippines is only 1330 miles. So if we intend to defend the Philippines, as President Roosevelt's recent mobilization of the islands' forces indicates we do, the safety of Singapore is vital to America.

To guard the safety of this fortified island at the tip of the spindling Malay Peninsula, the British have great land fortifications and American heavy bombers. Air Marshall Sir Robert Brooke-Popham commands British, Scottish, Australian, Malay and Indian troops — totaling 150,000 and steadily augmenting.

But he could withstand Japanese air attack from 400-mile distant Thailand, followed by land attack along the narrow Malay peninsula, only for a matter of months, according to estimate. For sea defense British warships are few, being needed in the Atlantic. In the Pacific, Britain depends largely on us. And, now that the Administration has decided to fight for the Philippines, we depend on Singapore.

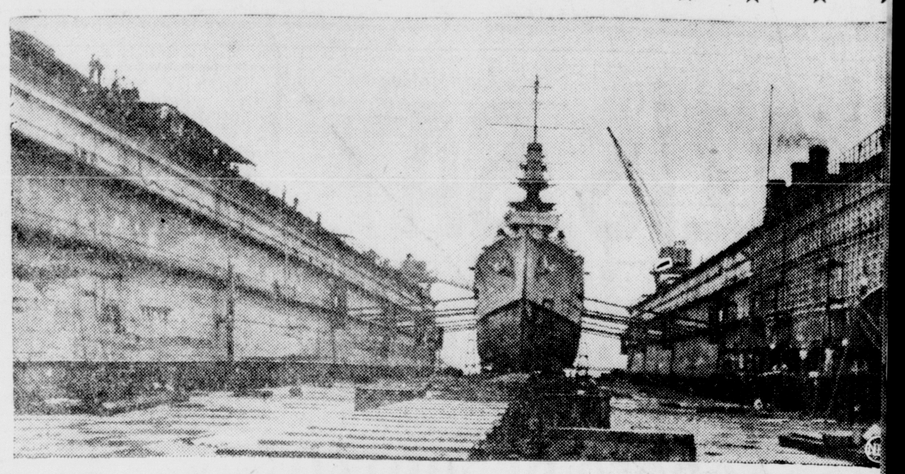

Without Singapore our Asiatic Fleet now in the Philippines could make only a delaying defense, aided by aircraft, especially long-range bombers. These have lately been flown to the islands in numbers intended to compensate for warships sent to the Atlantic before the occupation of Iceland—which swap of sea power for air power may or may not have encouraged Japan to move into Thai.

Certainly it has not stopped her from edging very close to crisis with us. For from Thailand the next logical step is to Singapore. So real a menace is that to us that Japan might not make it at all without simultaneously attacking the Philippines, which flank her line of communications. She might risk it for the very reason that she understands why Singapore means so much to us.

In addition to Singapore we have been promised use of a new base Britain is establishing in Borneo and even of a so-called "secret base" in Ceylon, of the bases Britain's Dutch ally holds in Surabaya and Amboina, and of Australia's Fort Darwin.

other side from the immediate danger from Japan in French Indo-China and Thailand. We need more time to strengthen our supply line for the Philippines via Wake and Midway islands, culminating in the support position at Guam that Congress long refused to fortify.

Japan's move into Thailand may be preliminary to an attack on the British at Singapore, or a threat to keep them quiet during a Japanese move north against Soviet Siberia. Regardless, Singapore's safety is a pillar of our Far Eastern strategy—not just Singapore's safety for Britain, but Singapore's safety for us. Our need to hold up that pillar will explain future moves in the Indies.

The U. S. Asiatic Fleet's Philippine bases at Cavite and Olongapo are inadequate to repair large ships, being particularly lacking in drydock facilities. This huge floating drydock at Singapore is but one of the vital facilities the great British naval base offers to American ships.

MOSCOW

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Aug. 11—(AP)—The Red army, reinforced by a rising tide of militia, was reported holding firm along the central battlefront today but officials acknowledged that defense lines at the north and south flanks were drawn back nearer Leningrad and deeper into the Ukraine.

Fighting continued throughout last night in the long-contested Smolensk salient and at Bel Tserkov, south of Kiev, a mid-day communique said, but a new battle was intensifying in the Uman area halfway between Kiev and Odessa in the Ukraine.

The Russians also reported fighting yesterday in another new sector, near Solsti, directly south of Leningrad and 70 miles east of the Estonian frontier.

The Red army reported effective use of cavalry in its traditional role of lightning attack with the opposing lines.

The communique described the tactics used by one cavalry group to shatter a German regiment. As preparation for the attack one cavalry squadron was ordered to make a withdrawal.

A company of the German regiment attempted to outflank this unit, whereupon the Russians attacked in force, wiped out the entire company, it was said, and split the regiment into several groups, encircling some.

Only a small portion of the regiment, identified as the 480th, was able to withdraw and about 500 Germans were killed and wounded and others taken prisoner, according to the Russians. Reported destroyed were 19 tanks, eight mor-

BERLIN

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Aug. 11—Rapid progress everywhere in "pursuit of the retreating enemy in the southern Ukraine" and developments according to plan on all other sectors of the eastern front were reported today in a taciturn communique from Adolph Hitler's headquarters.

The war bulletin thus reverted to terse generality after its voluminous claims of last week. Other German sources, however, insisted the entire Dnieper bend—embracing thousands of square miles of fertile Ukrainian plateau—was as good as lost to Russia.

On the northern front, DNB said the 180th Soviet light infantry division had been wiped out south of Lake Ilmen, east of Soltsi, which is about 120 miles south of Leningrad. The Russians were "completely annihilated," the agency said.

Confidence that Hitler's armies have cut solidly into the grain fields of the Ukrain followed upon reports of destructive German blows against the Red army in the southwest.

This optimistic outlook was based on accounts of success after success by Field Marshal Gerd von Rundstedt's German armies over Soviet forces of Marshal Semeon M. Budyenny, mustachioed Red army commander there.

"It still is an open question how far the Soviets will be able to complete their evacuation of this area without running into annihilation of themselves," said the commentary Dienst aus Deutschland, which has close Wilhelmstrasse connections.

"Great masses of the Budyenny army, it is well known, already have been destroyed," Dienst added.

While admitting that things were hottest in the grain-rich Ukraine, German sources insisted that more interesting military developments there did not mean that pressure on Moscow and Leningrad in any way had let up.

DNB made much of Saturday night's air attack upon Moscow, where it said a direct hit was scored on the Kremlin as nearly 100 planes strewed heavy explosives and fire bombs by the thousands in the biggest raid yet upon the Soviet capital.

(The Russians reported the Germans attempted another mass raid upon Moscow last night and early today and acknowledged there were dead and injured, but contended that military targets were not touched.)

Urkaine Conquest Only Just Begun for Nazis

Even if Germany captures Kiev and Odessa, occupying all of the shaded area on map, she will still be far from the richest agricultural, mineral and industrial districts of the Ukraine. Nazis still have many exhaustve miles of fighting ahead from the capital to the heart of the province.

NAVY READY TO RUN SHIPYARDS IF NECESSARY

Curtiss-Wright Propeller Plant Affected by Walkout; Mediation Board Considers Shipbuilding Company Strike

OTHER DEVELOPMENTS

By the Associated Press

A defense official said in Washington today that plans for government seizure of the Federal Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company at Kearny, N. J., were lying ready on the desk" at the Navy Department, for use if the company did not alter its "intransigeant" attitude in the strike which has tied up $493,000,000 in defense orders.

This official who is connected with OPM but declined to permit use of his name, predicted that action could be expected within 48 hours. He said it might take the form of company acceptance of a defense mediation board recommendation for settlement of the dispute with the CIO Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, or the government might take over operation of the big shipyard.

He said pressure was being brought on the management of the firm by "management representatives within the OPM." It was indicated that such repres-

JAMES TO ACT ON MOST BILLS BY NIGHTFALL

Harrisburg, Aug. 11—(AP)—Governor James said today he expected to act before nightfull on all pending bills left by the 1941 legislature and leave immediately for a vacation.

"With possibly one or two exceptions, I expect to clean up all of them before the sun sets," he told his press conference.

The governor said that several additional messages to accompany his action on the bills now were being prepared and would be available later in the day.

James has affixed his signature to a total of 407 bills and vetoed 54. Bills unacted upon 30 days after the session adjournment automatically become law.

Two bills still before him commanded particular attention in the General Assembly. They were a measure increasing the legal size of tractor trailer trucks from 39,000 to 42,000 pounds and an act setting up a seven-member dairy advisory council to promulgate new statewide, uniform milk sanitation regulations.

Several others of general interest include amendments to the omnibus motor vehicle code calling for the secretary of revenue to issue limited licenses to minor traffic violators needing their automobiles for business purposes; two validating measures for municipal authorities, effecting bonds issued while city officials

BY ALVIN J. STEINKOPF

Smolensk, Russia (By telephone to Berlin) Aug. 11—(AP)—Smolensk, once stately Russian city on the banks of the upper Dnieper, has taken it place among the communities erased by war.

I walked over its ashes, the first American newspaperman to reach this sector of the central front since it was captured by the Germans July 16.

(The Russians, only today, declared "our troops continued fighting in Smolensk," 250 miles west of Moscow).

A ceaseless stream of German trucks rolled past the blackened chimneys of burned-out factories and homes and past the shells of the few houses which still stood precariously amidst the devastation.

Asked how much of Smolensk was destroyed, a German officer estimated 90 per cent. He declared most of the damage was caused by withdrawing Russian troops carrying out Premier Joseph Stalin's orders to "scorch the earth in the face of the enemy."

Only about 20,000 of the 160,000 civilians who resided in Smolensk a month ago have remained among the ruins.

That shows what is left.

German soldiers swarmed over the entire scene, cleaning up and bringing about order so that the German war machine may operate efficiently in the thrust on to the east.

The soldiers have little time for the problems of the civilians and pay little attention to them.

The front has moved on east a few kilometers in the direction of Moscow. Artillery rumbles in the east. Warylanes roar overhead, some of them bombers operating from airdromes which the Germans say they took over almost intact after Russian withdrawals.

The front, at segments where I approached, seemed quiet. It was explained, however, that such an appearance might be deceptive, that strategic considerations at any one moment might require troops to the right or left to thrust forward; that even in a blitz war on a front spread across a continent every soldier isn't on the move every minute.

The Germans said many of the men would be overhauling equipment, catching their breath, or even washing socks in the Dnieper, and uncounted thousands were on dusty highways, along railroads and in the air bringing up supplies which modern warfare uses at a terrific rate.

A hundred miles of travel in this combat zone—much of it in a German military transport plane—

U. S. EYES OUTCOME AT VICHY

Future Diplomatic Relations With French Government Depend Upon Decisions Taken at Meeting of Petain Cabinet on German Collaboration Demands; Formal Comment Lacking

NAZIS DESIRE SHARE IN EMPIRE DEFENSE

Washington, Aug. 11—(AP)—The United States made its future diplomatic relations with the French government contingent on the decisions taken today at the meeting of Marshal Petain's cabinet in Vichy.

Relations would be severed, it was reported, if the Vichy government accedes to the latest German collaboration demands and permits the Nazis the "share" they seek in defending the French empire.

This possibility caused conjecture whether the United States might then extend recognition to the "Free French" forces of General Charles De Gaulle—a step which DeGaullists believe would rebound psychologically to the benefit of their cause in most of the French possessions.

Regardless of what happens on this particular point, the belief in diplomatic circles was that the United States would adopt a vigorous counter policy against any Franco-German collaboration program promising to install Nazi forces in the strategic bases on the Atlantic seacoast of French African colonies.

Although officials were chary of formal comment, there seemed to be a disposition to expect the worst from today's deliberations at Vichy.

The opinion in some quarters was that the Vichy government had a definite purpose in view Saturday when it released the statements made in a Paris interview by Fernand De Brinon, its envoy in the occupied zone. The burden of De Brinon's remarks was that France had decided to accept the Nazi version of the new world order as opposed to the Anglo-American concept.

Any deal that would allot Germany a "share" in defending French possession, it was pointed out, would immediately bring into question the status of French colonial holdings in the western hemisphere—notably the strategically located island of Martinque in the Caribbean.

FORMER STOCK EXCHANGE HEAD LEAVES PRISON

Ossining, N. Y., Aug. 11—(AP)—Richard Whitney, who lost $11,000,000 in Wall Street, left prison walls a free man today after making a profit of $181.01 in 40 months in Sing Sing.

The 53-year-old former president of the New York Stock Exchange, paroled after serving three years and mour months of a 5-to-10 year sentence for stealing $214,000 from client brokerage accounts, was met by his brother, George, in a chauffeur-driven limousine.

Whitney greeted his brother, a J. P. Morgan partner who advanced $2,600,000 of his own fortune in a vain attempt to save Whitney's firm from bankruptcy in 1938 with a silent handclasp. Neither spoke until the big car pulled away from the prison to carry Whitney to the Barnstable, Mass., dairy farm which he will superintend.

As he emerged from the prison, wearing a slightly baggy gray suit and gray hat and squinting uncertainly in the bright sunshine, Whitney's pallid, heavy face lit with a smile.

He declined to talk with interviewers, however, declaring repeatedly but with unfailing courtesy:

"I haven't got a thing to say. Not a word. Not a word".

It was a block from the prison entrance to the waiting limousine, and the onetime spokesman of

SEEK PURCHASE TAX ON ITEMS NOT ESSENTIAL

Investment Bankers Association Proposes Levy as Alternative to Stiff Increases in Income Taxes; Set Limits for Bill

DELAY COSTING MUCH

Washington, Aug. 11—(AP)—A purchase tax on non-essential articles was suggested by the Investment Bankers Association today as an alternative to stiff increases in income taxes.

In a statement presented to the Senate finance committee by Harcourt Amory of Boston, chairman of its federal taxation committee, the association said that the tax should exempt such purchases as food, rent, gas, electricity and children's clothing. The association suggested that a 5 per cent tax be imposed on purchases of a second category of articles those falling between the classification of necessities and luxuries. A 10 per cent tax would be paid on purchase of luxury items.

Amory estimated such a tax, similar to one now in operation in Great Britain, would yield $602,200,000 in additional revenue.

The witness said that house-approved increases in income taxes were "too sudden" and suggested that the total increase be limited to 40 per cent, instead of 66 projected 48 per cent. This would cut the yield from the house-approved income levies from $2,151,900,000 to $1,803,800,000 Amory estimated.

The witness also suggested that the income tax base be broadened, that rates be increased somewhat on incomes between $2,000 and $10,000. That liquor and tobacco taxes be further increased and that estate and gift taxes be retained at their present levels.

An outside limit of $4,000,000,000 was fixed for the new tax bill today by influential members of the Senate finance committee.

Secretary Morgenthau advised the committee last week that a $5,400,000,000 measure would be necessary if the treasury was to attain its financial goal of two-thirds revenue and one-third borrowing. Accordingly treasury experts now are working on plans to arise the $3,236,700,000 house-approved bill by $2,163,300,000.

Chairman George (D-Ga) predicted, however, that the senate finance committee would not add more than $500,000,000 to the house bill. He told reporters that the senate should pass a tax measure as soon as possible in order to save revenue which otherwise would be lost.

The treasury has estimated that the government is losing more than $2,000,000 a day through delay in enacting excise provisions of the pending revenue legislation.

Senator Brown (D-Mich), a member of the finance committee, informed reporters he hoped the tax measure could be increased "to an even four billion". Brown and George agreed that the bill could not go above that limit without seriously upsetting the national economy.

"I don't think we can go as far as Secretary Morgenthau would like us to go" Brown declared. "We can't possibly raise $5,400,000,000 at this session."

BLOW TO FALL AT ANY TIME

Reports Indicate Japan Mobilizing Powerful Force in Manchukuo for Possible Northern Campaign; Firmer National Policy Urged By Head of Famous Black Dragon Society

TO ACT IF EUROPEAN RUSSIA SHOWS BREAK

BY J. D. WHITE

Peiping, Aug. 11—(AP)—Observers in this north China gate to Manchukuo nad Mongolia expressed conviction today that Japan's next theater of action is more likely to be Siberia than Thailand—and that the blow may fall any day.

(In Shanghai foreign military sources agreed that Japan was mobilizing a powerful striking force in Manchukuo, but usually well informed quarters still believed Japan would act only if European Russia seemed about to collapse.)

Informed quarters expressed belife that August was the latest the Japanese could expect to launch a campaign into eastern Siberia without a winter stalemate.

Reports coming with travelers from the northeast added up to one thing: That something big was going on in Manchukuo.

Sifting the rumors, informed quarters were convinced Japan probably has amassed in Manchukuo at least as many troops as the Russians they would encounter in eastern Siberia.

The best available estimates here were that Russia still has a normal strength of 500,000 effectives in Siberia, including some mechanized units, while Japan probably has doubled the normal Kwantung army strength of 250,000—if not trebled it as some unconfirmed reports indicated.

Close analysts of Japanese policy held that the Japanese move into French Indo-China and reported pressure on Thailand to join the east Asiatic bloc were a priminary side-show to the main event, yet to come.

They pointed out that Japan, with two divisions in Indo-China, hardly would be likely to challenge the British to an actual test in Thailand.

These sources expressed belief that pressure on Thailand would go so far—short of war—and Jap-

Oklahoma Penitentiary Warden Is Victim of His Own Iron-Clad Rule

BY FRANCIS E. BARDEN

McAlester, Okla., Aug. 11—(AP)—An iron-clad rule he, himself, laid down several years ago, brought death to Warden Jess F. Dunn of the Oklahoma penitentiary and to two escaping convicts and a former prison guard in a brief but bloody Sunday break, the worst in three decades.

Several years ago Dunn told Bill Alexander, then a guard, "If there ever should be a break and the convicts get hostages, even if they get me and I tell you not to shoot, go ahead and shoot."

Alexander, now a deputy sheriff, remembered that admonition yesterday when he intercepted four, long-term prisoners who had seized the warden and a chance companion, J. H. Fentriss, in the prison yard yesterday.

The prisoners started shooting and Alexander shot back.

Dunn was the first victim. The enraged convicts shot him twice in the head and stabbed him through the heart.

Other dead:

Tab Ford, 52, former guard and former deputy who was in the sheriff's office when Alexander got the alarm and joined him in the chase.

Roy McGee, 36, serving 15 years for armed robbery.

Claude Beavers, 39, under sentence of 25 years for armed robbery and under a life term for a break in 1936 when Dunn led the posse which caught him.

Prison officials said he was the leader of both the 1936 uprising and that yesterday.

Inquiring Reporter Seeks Cause Hustle And Bustle In Community

The Inquiring Reporter has something on his mind.

What's all the rush about down in our press room?

What's all the rushing about of our Advertising Lady?

We tried to find out but to no avail. We walked into several stores and there we found a certain hustle and bustle, but when we asked "Why the rush?" they only asked us to "Hush" and perhaps tomorrow the cat would be out of the bag.

"Couldn't you give us a little inkling," said we.

"My no," said they. "You just wait and tomorrow you will find out. There's going to be big doings around this town the last of this week, and boy, oh boy . . . . well, now, we almost let that out."

Seeing we could find out not one thing, we came back to our office and asked our "Lady of the Ads."

Said she, "Oh, I mustn't tell you, but tomorrow you'll know."

"Tomorrow, Tuesday?" asked we.

"Yes," said she.

And so, my dear readers, tomorrow, Tuesday, we will have something of great importance to divulge to you.

ROYSTONE MAN SERIOUSLY HURT IN AUTO MISHAP

Struck by a car in Roystone shortly after one o'clock Sunday morning, Mike Miley, of that place, is in the Kane Community Hospital with injuries which may prove fatal.

Miley is suffering from fractures of both legs, severe brush burns and shock. At the Kane hospital today his condition was described as "poor."

According to state motor police from the local substation, Miley is alleged to have stepped in front of an automobile operated by Robert E. Flatt, 35, of 210 Walsh avenue, Kane, while the latter was driving east through Roystone.

It is believed that Miley either stepped out from another machine or started across the highway without making certain that traffic was clear. He was struck and thrown some distance.

Flatt stopped his car immediately, according to state motor police, possibly saving the life of Miley with first aid rendered before other help arrived.

Miley is reported to be employed at the Roystone pumping station.

Two persons, Mrs. Mildred Spangenberg and her small baby, were treated at the Warren General Hospital Sunday night for injuries received in an accident which occurred on the Russell-Scandia road.

Mrs. Spangenberg, wife of William Spangenberg, of 19 Langford street, Jamestown, N. Y., was treated for a leg injury and for brush burns about the face and shoulders. The child had similar face and shoulder injuries. Following treatment, they were taken to their home in Jamestown, neither being seriously injured.

The accident occurred when cars driven by Spangenberg and Ralph Swanson, of Russell R. D. 1, collided and the former's vehicle overturned. State motor police who investigated stated that Swanson will be charged with a violation of the motor vehicle code, since, it is said, he was driving without an operator's license.

FOURTH MAN IS HELD IN FRAUD AT SHEFFIELD

Sheffield, Aug. 11—The fourth and, officials believe, final member of the ring of conspirators which, through the medium of falsified weight slips for cullet glass sold to the company, defrauded the Pennsylvania Bottle Company here of several thousands of dollars was arrested Saturday.

He was Frank Doyle, 56, of 16½ Main street, Portville, N. Y., cullet dealer who has been trucking scrap glass to the local plant for several months. Doyle was arrested at his home in Portville by a member of the New York state police and Sanford K. Secor, Sheffield police chief.

Brought to Sheffield the same day by Secor, Doyle, who waived extradition, was arraigned before Justice Edwin Anderson here on a charge of "cheating by fraudulent pretenses." He pleaded guilty, and in default of $1,000 bond was committed to the Warren county jail.

The other three members of the ring, previously arrested on the same charge and now free on $1,000 bond each, are: John W. Hollis, Erie; Harry Nelson and James Suppa, both of Sheffield.

and eight submarines. In the same period eight warships were launched, including the battleship South Dakota, third of the six new 35,000-tonners to hit the water.

The optimistic forecasts were hedged by navymen, however. With the proviso that no serious and lengthy labor difficulties develop. And it was noted that sudden involvement of this country in war would disrupt the program.—Secretary of Navy Knox has declared "the first thing we could do" would be to suspend work on heavy units to free skilled workers for production of destroyers, submarines and planes which could be rushed into action with minimum delay.

House Leaders Agree to Make Any Confession

(From Page One)

Washington, Aug. 11—(AP)—House administration leaders, faced with a stiff fight, decided today to make every concession necessary to obtain approval of legislation authorizing President Roosevelt to extend service for the rank and file of the army beyond the present statutory limits.

The first important votes on the bill were delayed at least until tomorrow, however, when Speaker Rayburn announced the House would meet only briefly and then adjourn out of respect to Rep. Albert G. Rutherford of Pennsylvania, who died yesterday.

Although the outlook was beset by some uncertainties, the Army meanwhile apparently had decided to count on ultimate passage of the measure and to risk its present troop dispositions accordingly.

General George C. Marshall, chief of staff, testified a month ago that if the bill did not pass by August 1 outpost garrisons would have to be impaired by the withdrawal of units containing men whose service was about to expire.

Officials said, however, that they knew of no orders relieving National Guard units in Hawaii which Marshall said would have to be issued by the August 1 deadline if these units were to be demobilized before expiration of their year's duty.

In the absence of an official explanation, it was assumed that the orders had been withheld in the expectation that the legislation, now close to a final vote in the House, would be approved shortly.

entatives included, among others, Priorities Director E. R. Stettinius, Jr., former board chairman of United States Steel Corporation, of which Federal Shipbuilding is a subsidiary.

If no settlement is in sight by Wednesday night, the official said, it "is quite obvious that the Navy would have to take over management of the concern just as it would take over a picket line."

The Navy's plan, it was said, would require approval of President Roosevelt who is cruising off the New England coast.

The dispute centers around a union shop demand by the CIO. The mediation board ... ed that the management agree to discharge employes who failed to maintain good standing in the union. The union accepted the recommendation but the company rejected it. The strike involves 17,000 workers.

William H. Davis, chairman of the mediation board, was expected back in Washington today, after cutting short a vacation on the Pacific coast.

Government representatives sought anxiously today to bring workers and management together in strikes which involve hundreds of millions of dollars in contracts for ships and airplane parts.

Still unsettled after a three day work stoppage was an AFL walkout at the Curtiss-Wright Company's propeller plant in Caldwell, N. J., which has more than $100,000,000 of defense orders.

Plant officials made no attempt to operate yesterday but said the plant was open and operating today. Jason Woodbury, president of the International Machinists of America local, claimed, however, that 950 of the plant's 1,000 production workers were on strike. He said only 50 of the 800-man day shift went through the picket line.

Charles Tranter Is New Drum Major For Washington Redskins

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Tranter, 8 Cottage Place, received word today that their son, Charles, has been chosen as one of two drum majors for the Washington Redskins, member team in the National Professional Football League.

Young Tranter, employed in the alien registration department in Washington, D. C., tried out for the post about two weeks ago. He was graduated from Warren High School this spring and in his senior year was drum major for the Dragon Band, directed by Harry A. Summers.

The Redskins' band is one of the outstanding musical organizations of the capital section, consisting of 110 men who wear Indian costumes for garb. With the band is a swing group and a glee club, all three units traveling with the football team and all performing on the field.

Trips will include accompanying the players to Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, New York and Brooklyn.

Hunt Jobs For Recipients of State Relief

make itself felt in a steady though as yet not large reduction in the number of persons receiving state aid.

It has been inaugurated by the county boards of assistance, made up of persons who know the residents of the community best.

What's happening is a new concept of the duties of a relief agency and here is how it works:

A local board calls in long-termers on the relief rolls, determines what has been preventing the wage earner of a case from obtaining a job and then charts a course to correct it. In many instances the trouble is a physical disability that can be corrected. The board sees that it is and as a result the person is able to leave relief rolls and accept employment.

To bolster the authority of the county boards to take such steps, sometimes at a cost of buying medical equipment for the reliefer, the 1941 legislature passed an enabling law and it recently was signed by Governor James. The act, generally, simply legislates the authority that the boards have been using anyway.

The city of Corry is slated to begin this week the enforcement of Bill No. 550, which governs the operation of trains through that town and which fixes the maximum speed at twenty miles an hour, and also a five-minute maximum on blocking crossings. Chief of Police John D. Flanigan last week served notice on officials of both divisions of the Pennsylvania and also the Erie railroad that enforcement was to start August 10.

Man About Manhattan

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—For eye appeal, Xavier Cugat puts on a bang-up show. The Spaniard has a first class organization, with plenty of frills and maneuvers that mean absolutely nothing to the qualtiy of his music, but the spectators eat it up. Cugat now has monopolized interest at the Waldorf-Astoria for half a dozen years.

In winter, it is at the famed Sert Room, which probably is the nicest single room east of the Mississippi. And in summer, when the sidewalks broil and the nights are limpid and lackluster, it is at the Starlight Roof where Xavier and his fiddle, his frilly-shirted Cubans, his gourd thumpers and rhumba hounds do a brisk trade in entertaining the customers.

For one thing, there is always a breeze there, and whether it is artificial or not I have never been able to ascertain, but I do know that you come away with the impression that that breeze was put there just for you.

For another, the lights are just right, neither too dim nor too bright. For a third, Cugat himself is good company. He's a fine caricaturist, one of the best, and if anyone asks him for an autograph, he sketches a caricature of himself on a menu and presents it to you. At the moment Cugat is illustrating a book and he is working very hard at it. He does an illustration a day.

CUGAT also takes time out occasionally to rail (but good-naturedly) at swing bands who swing the congas and rhumbas.

In protest recently he made a conga out of the Hut-Sut Song. As Cugat plays it, the Hut-Sut now stands out like the imprint of lipstick on a bald head.

"After all," he says, "you've got to do something to get even with those guys."

The prettiest dancer I ever saw at the Starlight Roof was Loretta Young. She was dressed in something that was pale blue and she seemed to float on the air. The most enthusiastic American I ever saw there was Irving Berlin. The most gratifying sight I ever saw there was a filet mignon garnished with mushrooms and souffle potatoes. There I go again, thinking about food. . . .

Most of Cugat's friends call him Xavey. . . . He was born in Barcelona, drives a special-model car, and wears a beret. . . . He's a top-notch swimmer, and he has two brothers who are topnotch artists.

Cugat's love of caricaturing people about got him into trouble. . . . A woman sued him because she didn't like his pen and ink impressions of her. . . . But Cugat won the case. . . . Thursday's are busy days for him, because he rehearses all day, and goes on the air that night, in addition to his regular dancing stint. . . . He used to have 12 dogs but now has only two—a shepherd and a peke. . . . They live at the hotel with him. . . . In canine fancy, he follows no set breed. All dogs are fine, he explains.

The color scheme in the fruit markets of 6th avenue is now plum and peach. . . . Meaning all those new shipments from California, Georgia and Florida are arriving. . . I have seen peaches in New York advertised for a dollar each. . . . But they were from South America, and were put out to attract idiots.

"HELPIN' BACK" SOLVES FARMER LABOR PROBLEM

"Helpin' back" is being resorted to by Pennsylvania farmers this year more than ever due to the shortage of farm labor, according to information received by James E. Walker, chairman of the AAA Defense Committee, now engaged in a statewide survey in an effort to determine the definite need of farm labor.

While it has long been a custom in Pennsylvania for farmers to "help back"—to cooperate in assisting their neighboring farmers to harvest their crops, reports indicate the extending of this custom to many communities this year in helping to solve the shortage of farm labor. In many cases, also, farm hands are being loaned to neighbors.

Cooperating with the AAA Defense Committee in the farm labor survey have been the State Employment Service, WPA, Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Federal State Crop Reporting Service, Department of Public Assistance, and the local county committee of the Agricultural Conservation Bureau. Chairman Walker urges all farmers to fill in their farm labor survey form and return it to their county agricultural conservation office. This they are asked to do whether or not they are in need of farm help at the present time. This is essential to obtaining a complete picture of the farm labor situation in the state.

Preliminary figures, based on forms received from farmers in a portion of the counties and tabulated by the State Employment Service indicate a total of 8,000 harvest hands will be needed by Pennsylvania farmers, according to John S. Bleecker, field supervisor for the State Employment Service, and specially assigned to farm placement studies. The tabulated information received from farmers, Mr. Bleecker states, indicates that these 8,000 harvest hands will not all be needed at the same time, but will be spread out over the periods for harvesting various seasonal crops—grains, fruits and vegetables. Additional forms are yet to be received and tabulated.

Bleecker, likewise, urged all farmers to supply information to the county agricultural conservation committee in order that a clear picture of the farm labor situation may be obtained, not only for this year but for next year as well. He states that if the Employment Service has sufficient information as to how many farm workers will be needed and the time at which they will be needed, the service will be able better to supply workers at the proper time, if requested by farmers to do so.

WARREN COUNTY DIRECT RELIEF ROLLS DECLINE

While Pennsylvania's direct relief rolls turned upward for the second consecutive week, due to recent heavy cuts in WPA employment, Warren county reported a decrease of eight cases during the week ending August 2, according to information from the state public assistance department.

Warren county's decrease brought the total number of cases here down to 78, representing 104 persons. The drop was the result of closing eight cases, with none being opened. Six of the eight were attributed to gains in private employment.

Cost of relief in the county during the week was $225.

In the state there was a net increase of 1,324 cases during the week, bringing the total to 99,800 cases containing 208,919 persons. Cost of relief to the state was $525,894.92.

Following are the figures for some nearby counties:

Clarion—Cases, 247; decrease, 1; cost, $1,055.69.

Crawford—Cases, 306; decrease, 8; cost, $1,134.66.

Elk—Cases, 117; decrease, 4; cost, $492.17.

Erie—Cases, 596; decrease, 24; cost, $2,322.97.

Preparedness for disaster and possible catastrophes resulting from increased industrial activity due to national defense will keynote a "disaster preparedness institute" to be held by the Warren County Chapter of the American Red Cross tomorrow at the Y. W. C. A. activities building.

There will be both morning and afternoon sessions and a luncheon at noon.

Red Cross chapters all over the state are conducting similar preparedness conference in order to be prepared for any and all emergencies, it is pointed out by Neil Paterson, chairman of the local chapter's disaster preparedness committee.

The institute will be conducted by Miss Helen Moses, of Washington, D. C., national disaster representative and graduate of Mt. Sinai Training School for Nurses. She has also done special study at Columbia University.

Miss Moses came to the American Red Cross in 1918 as a member of the war-time foreign service nursing staff. She was appointed to the national disaster staff in 1929 and has served in all major disasters in the Eastern United States since that time. From 1922 to 1926, she was a case worker for the Los Angeles Chapter of the Red Cross. For two years following that period, she was a reserve worker in disaster relief.

When not engaged in disaster relief work, Miss Moses is loaned to the organization's chapter service for important roll call assignments and chapter studies. She served as acting secretary of the Miami, Fla., chapter from November, 1935, to January, 1936.

THE RECORD .... Facts That Concern You

A BAD ONE DOES TURN UP ONCE IN A WHILE!

Good weather and a bumper crop! Even then one finds a poor stalk once in a while.

The retailing of beer is something like that. Most beer retailers operate respectable law-abiding establishments. Occasionally one finds an exception—a man who tries to beat the law or who permits anti-social conditions.

The beer industry wants this type of undesirable retailer stamped out. Your cooperation will help us in our clean-up efforts.

The beer industry brings important benefits to the community. Here in Pennsylvania, beer provides employment for 73,372 persons, supports an annual payroll of $70,549,660 and contributed $7,183,635.63 last year in state taxes.

Pennsylvania, too, has an important stake in the beer industry's purchases—for materials, equipment, and services—from over 100 other industries.

You can help us protect these benefits in two ways. First—patronize only the reputable places where beer is sold. Second—report to the proper authorities any law violation you may observe.

SATISFACTION OF MORTGAGE

In the Court of Common Pleas of Warren County, Pennsylvania

No. 46, Sept. Term, 1941

In re:

Petition of Andrew P. Christensen and Mary E. Christensen for Satisfaction of Mortgage given by James Spoon and Bertha Spoon to Henry M. Ayling.

To Henry M. Ayling or his legal representatives, or whoever may be the holder or holders of the mortgage hereinafter mentioned.

Take notice that on August 4, 1941, Andrew P. Christensen and Mary E. Christensen presented their petition averring that they are the owners of the following real estate:

All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the Township of Columbus, County of Warren, and Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, bounded and described as follows, to-wit: Commencing at the southwest corner of land of Joshua Spoon, thence west to a post near the fence on the line between Oliver Casler and the heirs of George W. Carrier, deceased; thence westerly to the center of the road leading from Columbus to Spring Creek by Mead's mill; thence along the center of the road aforesaid to the west line of Joshua Spoon; thence along the said line one hundred (100) feet to the place of beginning, supposed to contain one acre of land, be the same more or less.

Also, one other piece or parcel of land situate in said Township of Columbus, bounded and described as follows, to-wit: Commencing at the northwest corner of lands of the heirs of John Carrier, deceased; thence west forty-two and one-tenth (42.1) rods to a post; thence south one degree west one hundred and fifty-four (154) rods to a post in Blanchard's north line; thence east by the same fifty-two and one-tenth (52.1) rods to a post, the south corner of said Carrier land; thence north one degree east along the said John Carrier's west line one hundred and fifty four (154) rods to the place of beginning, containing forty-one acres of land, be the same more or less.

That an unsatisfied mortgage upon said premises, given by James Spoon and Bertha Spoon to Henry M. Ayling, dated April 24th, 1900, due and payable five years after the date thereof, remains of record in the office of the Recorder of deeds for Warren County, Pennsylvania, in Mortgage Book Vol. 24, page 284, recorded May 31st, 1900, and that the period of twenty-one years has elapsed since the principal of said mortgage became due and payable, and no payment has been made on either principal or interest of said mortgage nor demand for the same within said period, and praying for satisfaction thereof.

Whereupon the said Court ordered that notice of the said facts be served by the Sheriff of Warren County, Pennsylvania, on whomever may be the known holder or holders of the said mortgage if to be found in the said county, and having known residences, and if not, then to give public notice by advertisement requiring them to appear in the said Court on Monday, the first day of September, 1941, at ten o'clock A. M., to answer the said petition and to show cause why the proper decree should not be granted, and the said mortgage satisfied of record.

STILL AN OBLIGATION

Even though National Chairman Thomas E. Dewey has announced that the goal for the United Service Organizations has been passed, that does not relieve Warren county from its obligation of endeavoring to raise its quota of $3,800. Cash contributions and checks are still acceptable and just by way of reminder H. B. Meacham, at the Warren National Bank, is treasurer.

The heartening thing about it is not that the goal should be exceeded—so great a country could scarcely fail to reach so small a goal, but in the large number of communities and people who gladly took part. It is like the aluminum collection. The amount of aluminum gathered up will not change greatly the situation, though every ton helps. But the millions of people who took part all showed their determination to back up the defense effort.

If it is decided that the national safety requires more than the present million and a half men in the Army, and requires that they serve longer, the USO campaign will have proved just a starter. But it is an encouraging starter.

REWARD FOR APPEASEMENT

Russia must be industriously kicking itself these days. In the 18 months just before Germany turned on the friend who had tried to appease her, Russia sent Germany a million tons of oil, including lubricants and aviation gasoline. That is a British estimate, and though Germany never got as much oil from Russia as she had hoped, there is no reason to doubt that she got that much.

Now that same aviation gasoline, or its equivalent, is being used to bomb Moscow; those same lubricants, or their equivalent, smooth the way for the panzer divisions in their drive on Kiev and Leningrad.

By the way, how are our own oil shipments to Japan going?

That concert by the Salvation Army band Sunday afternoon in General Joseph Warren Park was enjoyable in the simplicity of the numbers chosen on the program, although the more difficult pieces were played in a manner that was most commendable. Major Flinn and the staff are to be congratulated for the progress shown by this group of young musicians, many of whom left today for the Pittsburgh band camp.

An event that should not be overlooked by Warren citizens is the proposed road opening celebration in connection with the annual home coming at Enterprise Wednesday. That new highway between the Southwest township village and the Warren county line is one of the finest in the county. Would be a good idea for Warren to have a good-sized delegation on hand.

Reverent tribute to the memory of George W. Olmsted was the vesper service at Ludlow Sunday afternoon, inaugurated by Mr. Olmsted seven years ago. The beautiful weather added to the quiet solemnity of the evening, marking the program the most outstanding in the series yet held in the attractive Gardens.

A perfect week of August weather has been enjoyed, not only by vacationists, but all those whose vacation has not yet arrived. The week-end was particularly delightful, with the populace making the best of every moment. All nearby picnic grounds were filled to capacity Saturday and Sunday evenings.

Maybe it's just as well that Warren didn't secure that long-hoped-for swimming pool. They say down at Washington if the shortage of chlorine continues next year, for water purification, swimming pools may have to be closed down or their use restricted.

Better begin grooming those flowers for the annual Warren National Bank show, which will be here before you realize it.

Getting so you almost have to make a reservation for a table for Sunday morning breakfast in Washington Park.

If you gas before seven you won't be out before eleven!

EDSON'S WASHINGTON COLUMN

BY PETER EDSON
Times-Mirror Washington Correspondent

Washington, Aug. 11—A manufacturer of steel penpoints who had gone out and done something about building up trade in his product with South America came to Washington not long ago with tears in his eyes as he told his sad story to anyone who would listen.

Here he had built up this trade, and he had customers all over Latin America using his brand of streamlined, ball bearing, knee-action, non-skid, ultra-modern pen that could write English, Spanish or Portuguese interchangeably and without shifting gears.

Then, along came the defense effort, and when Mr. Penpoint Manufacturer put in an order for a ton of stainless steel—one lousy ton, mind you—to make his scribblers for export, the defense people cracked down on him, said he was running a non-essential industry, and to go make pens out of old tin cans or any other kind of scrap he could find.

Mr. Penpoint Manufacturer started telling his story, not in those precise words, but to that general effect. Finally he found someone who would listen and who took his South America seriously, realizing that Made-in-U. S. A. penpoints were important in waging economic warfare. This party knew the right wires to pull and —P. S.—the manufacturer got the necessary preference rating and order for delivery of the ton of steel.

This parable of the penpoint priorities is mentioned as an example of the kind of thing that isn't going to be allowed to happen in the future, by reason of the setting up of new machinery which will take care of just such cases.

The job of seeing that the South Americans and all friendly, foreign nations get what's coming to them, and that U. S. importers and exporters have no difficulty in getting the necessary priorities on supplies and shipping space has been given to the Division of Export Control, which is administered by General Russell L. Maxwell. Within the division, a new clearance section has been created, and it will be the duty of this section to see that justice is done, and in a hurry.

As matters stood before, half a dozen government agencies have their say-so on nearly every aspect of foreign commerce. The Department of State must determine if the exports or imports are in agreement with trade treaties, blacklists and embargoes. Army and Navy Munitions board must know if the deal complicates any defense work. Treasury must see that there is no violation of the frozen funds regulations. Maritime Commission must determine whether shipping space is available. Office of Production Management must make sure that priorities are not interfered with, and the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply must know the effect on U. S. non-military life. Department of Commerce must know all about foreign trade, and the Rockefeller Office of Inter-American Affairs is the friend in court of all the South American republics.

Under the old set-up, an exporter or importer wanting to get clearance had to see all of these departments separately. To say that what was left of U. S. foreign trade was rapidly being abandoned in the barbed-wire entanglements of all this red tape puts it mildly.

Under the new setup, all of these organizations will have a representative—a liaison officer—in General Maxwell's office. The eight agencies will then be able to put their OK or their NG on any of this business.

The relief of this simplified procedure to importers and exporters will obviously be tremendous. Taking the specific case of the penpoint manufacturer, all he will have to do when he wants his next ton of stainless steel is write to the clearance section, Division of Export Control, Washington, D. C.

He will get back an instruction sheet and the necessary forms. Properly filled out, these papers will go back to the Administrator of Export Control, and so fast are the wheels of the clearance section expected to be geared that the approvals and disapprovals will probably be ground out in a few days, instead of the weeks previously required.

Getting all this red tape smoothed out, by the way, is another one of the growing list of achievements of young Nelson Rockefeller. His division has been working on this problem for months, and finally put it over.

CRANIUM CRACKERS

CRIMSON CROWNS

All is not gold that glitters, for it may be just the red hair of one of the neighbor's children, or of some movie queen. See if you can get the answers to these questions about redheads.

1. What English and Egyptian queens were famous for their red hair?
2. By what nicknames are redheaded persons often called?
3. Name three of the five U. S. president who had red hair.
4. What British naval hero, and what English playwright were redheads?
4. Lord Netson, British naval hero, and William Shakespeare were redheads.
5. Name three movie or stage actresses with red hair.

A Washington Daybook

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—In view of all the hullabaloo there has been about subversive elements in labor, it is surprising that there was no more comment on a measure which slipped through the House of Representatives in a move to clear the marine radio operators' union of subversive agents.

The so-called Bland bill (sponsored by Rep. Schuyler Otis Bland of Virginia, chairman of the House merchant marine and fisheries committee) would give the Federal Communications Commission the right to deny a radio operator's license to any person employed on a United States merchant marine vessel whose subversive activities are proved to the extent of "reasonable probability."

There are several important things about this bill:

1. Should it become a law, it might well be the pattern for other measures designed to weed the communists, bundists, and what-have-you from other fields of labor. Already several more such bills are being prepared in various committees.

2. Not a single dissenter rose against it in the House and it was given considerably more than lip service by such staunch friends of labor as Rep. Robert Ramspeck of Georgia and Jerry Voorhis of California. Ramspeck, in answer to a question on the floor, admitted that a representative of the C.I.O., with which the marine radio operators' union is affiliated, had asked him to oppose the bill, but said he had told him that he could no do so.

3. The bill defines a "subversive individual" as any one who believes in or advocates, or at any time has believed in or advocated "controlling, conducting, influencing, seizing, or overthrowing the Government of the United States by force, violence, military measures, or threats of any of the foregoing. . . . Who is, or at any time was, a member of, or who solicits or advocates membership in . . . the Communist party, the German-American Bund, the Young Communists league," or any other organization which believes in or teaches the tenets set forth. It doesn't take a Philadelphia lawyer to tell you that this covers a lot of territory, especially after the House committee added to it that a person is also guilty who "disseminates or distributes, or at any time has, etc., subversive propaganda."

4. According to Ramspeck, passage of the bill immediately would result in the revoking of licenses for about 150 of the 2,000 radio operators now employed by the merchant marine. These men would have the privilege of open hearings, but they would have to disprove evidence assembled against them by the army and navy intelligence services and the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

As an example of how some members of Congress feel about it, let's quote Ramspeck again, "I do not believe," he said, "it is in the interest of labor or anybody else in this country to have subversive individuals holding memberships in labor unions and in position to do damage to the welfare and safety of the United States of America and its merchant marine."

VOORHIS contributed this: "It has been my view all along that the kind of legislation that should be brought in the House is legislation that would attempt in a very careful and discriminating manner to separate the great rank and file of American labor from those elements that really make for trouble for the labor movement itself."

This may be only a straw in the wind, but insiders on Capitol Hill think it might also be a good-sized hunk of timber in building a foundation for a labor movement completely free of "fifth columnists." If this measure goes through the Senate without any serious blasts of opposition, the seamen may be next—and after that other labor groups involved in national defense.

It may be that the "enemy of democracy" boys in the labor camps are in for a bit of legislated trouble.

LOW footsteps dragged down the corridor. Jeff leaned inst the door jamb and waited. short swarthy individual in a e serge suit appeared opposite n.

"Now, listen, Miss Rogers!" There was a noticeable lack of affection in his attitude toward me. "If you know a better way, tell me. This case is a stone wall. Even Miss Blanton can't thelp me. We have one clue, Lee Gray. And even on that she can't give us anything."

"But really, I don't . . ." Carol began.

"You and I will discuss that later. And alone." He turned back to me. "Who knows if there'll be another attempt? If there is, it might be next Sunday or next year. Miss Blanton can't spend the rest of her life in hiding, can she? I don't say that anything will come of my boys tagging her. But if anyone behaves strangely, if somebody is too interested in her comings and goings, we'll know about it. Troy!"

"Yes, sir?"

"I don't mind you sticking your nose in the case. God knows we cops need all the help we can get. But I said help, not interference. If you know anything, or find out anything, you tell me. Quick."

"Of course."

"Yeah, but you won't. And you'll probably get hurt. But I'd be wasting my breath to warn you. Now, you take your girl for a walk. Miss Blanton and I want to be alone, don't we?"

Carol smiled and waved us away, but I thought I heard her catch her breath and saw her hands clench slightly as we closed the door.

Furious Actress

AT THE corner of Fifty-fourth and Lexington Jeff stopped. "What do you think the chances are of Bowers being in his office now?"

"Fair."

"Then we'll go see him first."

"First? Does that mean you're going detecting?"

Without even smiling modestly he nodded and we headed for the office in silence. We met Philip Ashley in front of the Colony Theater and the three of us turned down the alley together.

Inside the stuffy elevator I rummaged through my purse for my compact and lipstick. I would be stopping to powder my nose before venturing into a producer's office, I told myself ruefully, when I was ninety. A producer's office is a producer's office and it doesn't matter that you've got the job and played the part and it's over and done with. I snapped shut the enameled box and dropped it in my purse.

"It's fairly crass of me," Philip Ashley was saying, "to barge in on Clint at a time like this, I suppose, and to demand just what is what. But I thought it possible that he might want to close the show."

"Quite possible," Jeff said shortly.

Philip loosened the gay colored scarf that muffled his throat. "That's what I thought. Nevertheless, I have to know definitely in order to make my plans. I don't mind telling you that Hollywood's been after me for some time now. You know," he added warningly to me, "this isn't going to do any of us any good. Bad publicity. Very bad."

We stepped into the reception hall that fronted the office. It was empty. Phoebe's desk unopened and the door marked "Clinton Bowers—Private" closed. I put my hand on the knob but I didn't turn it. In the office someone was speaking and there was something in her tone that made us stop abruptly and look at each other.

"Please, please, Mr. Bowers," Alice McDonald was saying. She might have been reading for a part and overacting badly. "Let me try it. Just let me try it! You must know what it would mean to me! Oh, you've got to let me, you've got to give me this chance!"

"I'm sorry, Alice." Clinton Bowers' voice was very patient and very weary. "I have decided definitely to close the play at once. There will not be another performance of "Green Apples." That is final."

Anyone but the stage-crazed, thwarted girl that Alice was could have told he meant it. She said, "But, I . . ."

"This play is closing. No one is going to follow in the part that Eve North created here."

"Created!" Her voice exploded loud and scornfully. "Created! If you call mangling one of the most beautiful parts ever written creating! If you call babbling through it with a lot of tricks and phony mannerisms creating! No one's going to follow in her part, you'll see to that, won't you? Yes, you'll see to it all right and I know why, Mr. Clinton Bowers! Because any decent actress who followed in the part would show Eve North up too badly, wouldn't she? She'd show what a stinking sloppy mess she made of it! She'd show that your great Eve North was nothing but a ham, she's . . ."

"Alice!" His voice wasn't patient now; it was cold and threatening. "Get out of my office, Alice. Get out!"

His door swung open and we tried to look as though we were wending an uninterrupted way to the office, but I don't think Alice even saw us. She dashed straight into the elevator and the door slid quickly past her pale furious face.

CAPITAL GOSSIP

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—Only twice in the 71 years of the Department of Justice have there been such long periods as the present when the United States has had no Attorney General.

The reasons for President Grant's 56-day delay in filling the office and for President McKinley's waiting nearly six months to appoint a successor to Joseph McKenna are pretty much obscured in political history.

The reason for President Roosevelt's long delay in naming a successor to Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, whom he elevated to the United States Supreme Court, are almost as obscure — but not because there hasn't been plenty of speculation. Official Washington and the politicians have been wondering out loud, and 20,000 employes of the Justice Department have been parked on those proverbial pins and needles for weeks. Some are asking whether the appointment will affect their jobs. Others want to know how the new appointment will affect Department of Justice policies. The result: D. J. business has been almost at a standstill ever since Attorney General Jackson was appointed associate justice of the Supreme Court on June 12.

A Few Nuggets

TRYING to sift fact from rumor is a little like panning for gold where there isn't any—but there are a few nuggets worth considering.

For example, it is a foregone conclusion in most speculative circles that Francis Biddle, the deep-browed, mustachioed, tweedy Solicitor General will get the post and that Charles Fahy, his assistant, will be named Solicitor General. If such was preordained (and the Jackson appointment was so certain that it is impossible to conceive that his successor had not already been selected), why the delay?

Only two reasons have been advanced. One is that the President is waiting to see "how the administration will get along with Biddle." This is almost too silly to merit consideration. Biddle and the President were classmates, Groton and Harvard. And although Biddle wandered to the Bull Moose camp for Roosevelt I in 1912, he was well enough in line with the New Deal in 1936 to be chairman of the campaign speakers' committee. Although he is a little hard to tag in his political philosophy, as New Deal solicitor general he has batted .937 in successful handling of cases before the Supreme Court.

Maybe Murphy Wants It

THE second reason holds more water. That is, that the President has wavered before pressure groups seeking to swing the job to someone else. There is, for instance, Frank Murphy. The story goes that Murphy's 18 months on the Supreme Court have convinced him he wants no part of the quiet judicial life. He wants to be back in the thick of things. Both Murphy and Murphy's friends are believed to have been urging the President to return him to the post he once held.

Then there is Thurman Arnold, whose trust-busting has made him something more of a national figure than the Solicitor General.

And Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt, whose friends have been urging him to make a play for the post and undoubtedly speaking to the President in his behalf. It is known, however, that McNutt doesn't want the job. Although politically ambitious, McNutt is said to feel that his present job is a better one. The Attorney General may make the headlines much more frequently, but when he does, it must be in his capacity as prosecutor of the laws of the land — and prosecutors make enemies.

Two Versions

THERE the matter rests, with the President apparently waiting for two things: (1) To find a job for Associate Justice Murphy which he will like better than being on the Supreme Court or than again being attorney general, and (2) waiting for the pressure groups to get used to the idea that their men, for one reason or another, are not being considered.

Of course stranger things have happened in politics than a "slated" man (like Biddle) failing to get the job. Pressure groups sometimes do win out. The interesting thing is that only three times in 71 years has any similar situation caused the Department of Justice to go headless for so long.

NOT ENOUGH

Apparently the large gill surfaces of a tarpon do not meet his oxygen requirements. He frequently rises to gulp air and stores it in a special tissue of his swim-bladder.

USDA DEFENSE BOARDS NAMED BY STATE HEAD

The new United States Department of Agriculture State Defense Board for Pennsylvania, recently established by order of Secretary C. R. Wickard, held its organization meeting in Harrisburg last week. The meeting was called and presided over by James E. Walker, chairman of the State Agricultural Conservation Committee, who had been designated by the secretary to act as chairman of the newly created USDA Defense Board. Attending the meeting, in addition to Chairman Walker, were the following

Hugh S. Mackey, president, Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Baltimore, representing the Farm Credit Administration; E. L. Gasteiger, senior agricultural statistician, representing Agricultural Marketing Service; H. N. Reist, Pennsylvania State College, representing Agricultural Economics Extension; Carson F. Mertz, state director, Farm Security Administration; Harry O. Kimmel, state co-ordinator, Soil Conservation Service. Robert S. Einstein, chief educational section, AAA, Pennsylvania, was elected secretary.

The committee discussed the prospects for increases in certain commodities recently requested by the secretary and will report their findings to the secretary, together with recommendations for obtaining future increases. The increases requested involved certain vegetables for canning, pork, dairy and poultry products.

The membership of the defense board comprises a representative from each of the department agencies whose services will be called on by the secretary to administer actions necessary to carry out his departmental responsibilities in national defense.

Under directions of the secretary, the USDA State Defense boards are authorized to confer with, advise and arrange cooperation with other defense agencies having state or local offices, and to arrange for maximum cooperation of all departmental field personnel in these undertakings.

In each county in the state, a USDA County Defense Board has been established with the chairman of the county agricultural conservation committee designated as chairman. The other members of the county boards will comprise representatives of the various federal agencies who maintain organizations in the counties. The USDA County Defense Boards are responsible through their chairmen to the USDA State Defense Board.

River Barges Form "Rescue Fleet" To Aid the Gasoline-Hungry East

The Diesel towboat, St. Paul Socony, passing Chain of Rocks, above St. Louis, en route to Pittsburgh, pushing its recent record tow of 10,000 tons of gasoline. The tow, composed of eight barges, was two and a half blocks long.

By NEA Service

Pittsburgh, Aug. 11 — River barges which in recent years have placidly plied the muddy waters of the Mississippi in fewer and fewer numbers now are pouring oil from rich Gulf Coast oil fields on the troubled transportation problem of the East.

While unmoved oil accumulates in the Southwest for lack of coastwise ships, the U. S. has turned to its vast inland waterways system for the answer. Towboats and tank barges are taking petroleum products from Texas, through the Intracoastal Canal, up the Mississippi, through the upper Ohio Valley here to Pittsburgh, thence to help solve the looming oil shortage of the Northeastern and Middle Atlantic states.

The Diesel towboat St. Paul Socony is an example. It recently made what is probably the longest trip on record for a river towboat making one delivery when it traveled 4173 miles from Minneapolis to Beaumont, Tex., and back here with a cargo of petroleum. But barges from Texas usually travel through the Intracoastal Canal to the Mississippi, where they're taken up by another boat, then again transferred to still another anywhere from Memphis to Wheeling, W. Va.

Although barge traffic and oil cargoes on the waterways have immeasurably increased, if a proposed program goes through, the Mississippi will really become Oil Man River. The Mississippi River System Carriers' Association is making a survey for the OPM of all floating equipment to determine how river towboats can best aid in relieving the oil shortage in the East.

Barge building capacity is at present being fully utilized. But that capacity is only seven barges a month, and only 22 Mississippi River barges are under construction. There are two answers to this problem — additional yards could be provided, if barge and towboat builders received priority on steel and other material, and barges used in the past for other cargo could be converted into tankers. A number of barge owners have already asked the government's permission to do the latter. A bill pending in the House would help finance new river boats and barges.

Rivermen point out that there will be much less opportunity for sabotage if petroleum shipments are carried by rivers rather than concentrated in pipelines that would have to be patroled continuously. Even more important, they emphasize, is the fact that new barges could be built far sooner, with government aid, than pipelines could be completed. Pipelines, too, require a larger percentage of vital steel. Each river unit could go immediately into service, while the completion of an entire project would be necessary in the case of pipelines.

The size of tows used in moving gasoline and other commodities varies. Oil barges having a capacity of from 500 to 600 tons are most numerous in the oil-carrying trade. But most new barges have a capacity of approximately 1000 tons. A towboat may move 10 or more of these at one time on the lower Mississippi.

A record tow of 10,000 tons, or 3,500,000 gallons, of gasoline—equal to 400 average tank cars—was moved over the Chain of Rocks, bottleneck of the upper Mississippi River, this spring by the St. Paul Socony. The boat and tow of eight barges measured 927 feet, the length of two and one-half city blocks, or a parade of five old-time freight packets.

The botanical name of the true apple is malus malus.

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—They're going to make a movie out here from a script that was lived.

It's a simple script about a poor, rather puny little fellow, an American boy, who grew up into a tall, husky American hero and won fortune and fame and never let either turn his head. His name was Lou Gehrig.

Movie and baseball fans, and several producers, seem to have seen the possibilities in the script almost simultaneously. Samuel Goldwyn, as you know, has signed for the screen rights with Lou's pretty young widow, Eleanor Gehrig.

Mrs. Gehrig brought along her two gigantic scrap books, full record of an astonishing career from high school days to the tragic end.

"I don't know what the script will be," she says, "but I hope the story will be filmed as it actually happened—the story of an American boy.

MRS. GEHRIG wishes—and it is the producer's intention—to have the film the story of a life that happened to be lived in baseball rather than a baseball story. She hasn't any choice of an actor to play Lou, or an actress to play herself—though it's generally supposed that Gary Cooper, leaner than Gehrig was, will take the part.

Eleanor Gehrig, with her reminiscences, could almost write the scenario herself—this story of the son of immigrant parents, born in one of New York's poorest sections, under the clatter of the "L". The story of his early love for sports, counteracting his naturally delicate health, building up his body. High school days, and football at Columbia University, and the two years in the minor leagues and then the 14 years with the Yankees.

Boy meets Girl? It's perfect, just as it happened:

"I lived in Chicago and had seen him before, but I was a White Sox fan, and I remember rooting like everything for Lou Gehrig, Babe Ruth, and a few others to break a leg. Then we met and I became a Yankee fan. After we were engaged—it was the first all-star game in Chicago—I bought boxes for all my friends to see my hero play, my darling. He played. Somebody popped out a fly, and Lou missed it. Made the only error of the game and not a hit — my darling! . . ."

AND something about the western movie Lou made in Hollywood. "The Rawhider." "He'd never been on a horse in his life, but he loved it," she says. Colonel Ruppert (late owner of the Yankees) nearly died when he saw the picture, with all its stunting and wild riding—until Lou assured him it was done with doubles and he hadn't really risked his life . . ."

I hope they'll show Lou Gehrig cooking—his specialty, lobster saturated in New Orleans spices.

I know they'll show the way he was with youngsters who idolized him, and how he turned down small fortunes—when his creeping illness took him out of baseball—to take a $6,000 a year job as parole commissioner, working with youth.

They'll have a good movie if they merely follow the script that Lou Gehrig lived.

CIVILIANS WILL BE EMPLOYED IN ARMY POSITIONS

In line with the plan of the War Department throughout the country, Third Corps Area headquarters announced today a plan for giving certain jobs now held by soldiers in the corps area service command to civilian employes. The soldier released may be assigned to combat units or to act as instructors in the expanding army. This is another step toward increasing efficiency throughout the service.

An appropriation for this purpose was passed by Congress in the amount of $43,940,000 for the country as a whole. The present allotment to the Third Corps Area from this fund totals approximately $2,500,000.

Fort Belvoir, Carlisle Barracks, Fort Eustis, Indiantown Gap Military Reservation, Camp Lee, Fort Meade, and Fort Monroe will receive the largest proportion of this allotment. In addition to the allotment to the Third Corps Area, the exempted stations such as Langley Field, Aberdeen Proving Ground and Edgewood Arsenal will receive similar allotments.

It is expected that within the corps area approximately 3,500 soldiers will be replaced by civilians and that this will be in full operation by September 1st. A majority of such civilians will be drawn from eligible civil service lists.

The classification of workmen and artisans which will be needed for management and upkeep of posts, camps and other establishments of the Army are: operators of telephone, teletype and radio equipment; engineers, electricians, draftsmen, carpenters, blacksmiths, plumbers, steamfitters, machinists, sheet metal, leather and canvas workers; butchers, watchmen, janitors, firemen, and clerks.

Estimates of costs indicate that there are economic advantages also in this plan. A majority of the civilian employes will get about $1440 a year. Some in higher grades will receive an average salary of about $1510 a year. A comparative few will receive higher salaries. Among the men who will be replaced are master sergeants whose pay is approximately $1500 a year, which does not include allowances for food, clothing and medical attention. There will be a saving in the replacement of privates, too. Their upkeep ranges from $1700 to $2000 a year, excluding the cost of their equipment.

It was no surprise to me to find a pair of San Francisco players the international winners of the World Bridge Olympic. Robert P. Willson and George Gooden of San Francisco were the North-South winners of the Olympic this year.

This is a confirmation of what I told you in one of my earlier articles describing our transcontinental bridge tour—in my opinion, the caliber of bridge in San Francisco is higher on the average than I have found in any other section of the country.

Today's hand incorporates a difficult defensive play, but I am sure that if it were tested on a group of San Francisco players, all would make the correct play. West leads the seven of clubs as an exit, rightly fearing that a spade lead would give declarer his ninth trick.

South takes his ace of clubs and four diamonds. West discards the five of spades and East lets go his two fours. Declarer then cashes the queen of clubs and leads a small heart toward dummy.

West realizes that declarer, with eight top tricks, is probably planning to use the heart suit to force West in to lead spades. If West plays low, dummy will take the ace and lead another heart, and then no defense could stop game. But West forestalls the situation by playing the king of hearts, to leave himself two small hearts for exit. Now declarer cannot make the contract.

Local Citadel Sends Eleven Young People To Pittsburgh Camp

Eleven local Salvation Army boys and girls left this morning for the divisional corps cadet and band camp, to be conducted for ten days at the Army's fresh air camp at West View, near Pittsburgh.

Making up the Warren delegation were Edna Matha, euphonium player; Virginia Fellows, baritone; Iva Matha and Violet Fellows, altos; Virgil Fellows, bass; Leeil Matha, Charles Lucie and Bob Flinn, cornets; Betty and Beatrice Liberty and Betty Brown, additional cadets.

The curriculum will include Bible study, instrumental instruction and vocal harmony. There will be a recreational program that will include archery, mushball, swimming, tennis, hiking, various hobbies, campfires and other features.

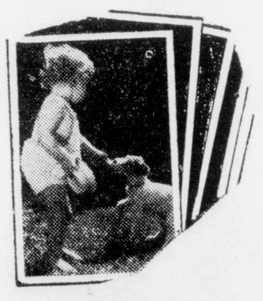

The camp is under the direction of the young people's supervisor, Major Charles McNally, and instructors include several Pittsburgh staff leaders and authorities on musical themes from western Pennsylvania, who are volunteering their services for the camp period.

Dodgers And Cards Sweep Bargain Bills In Senior Loop

Bucs Beaten Twice; Yankees Win Two As Tribe Falters Again

BY BILL BONI
Associated Press Sports Writer

Drama being somewhat outside this department's scope, there will be no effort made here today to tell you in glowing phrases of the history-making National League pennant race now in progress.

The drama, instead, will be left in the hands of the Brooklyn Dodgers and St. Louis Cardinals—and capable hands they are, too.

The facts are these—last Friday night Brooklyn was in front by three percentage points. Since then each team has played three contests. Yet today those same three points are all that separate the Dodgers in first place from the Cardinals in second.

This was achieved by a chain of circumstances which first saw the Boston Braves snap a seven-game Dodger winning streak on Saturday, and the Cardinals promptly lost a 13-inning thriller to the rambunctious Pittsburgh Pirates. Then yesterday there was a double victory for Brooklyn over the Braves, whereupon the Cards, already having won the opener of their doubleheader from Pittsburgh, broke loose with three runs in the eighth inning of the nightcap to take that as well.

In the first tilt, which almost broke into open warfare because the Dodgers felt Dick Errickson was trying to dust them off, Brooklyn pounded three pitchers for 17 hits, including four doubles and a homer by Ducky Medwick, for a 14-4 decision. The nightcap saw Stout Frederick Fitzsimmons and his knuckleball shut out the Braves 4-0, on six hits.

A crowd of 26,513, one of the year's largest in St. Louis, saw Ernie White take the opener, 3-2, for his 14th decision as Terry Moore's pinch-single drove in the deciding runs, and then watched Mort Cooper, though touched for 10 safeties, bear down in the clutch to win his 10th of the year.

Not only was this the first time the hopeful Pirates had lost two straight in the space of three weeks, but it dropped them nine and a half games off the pace.

The baseball tradition that it's bad luck to get presents held true for the Chicago Cubs' Charley Root. The 42-year-old veteran got a station wagon from his fans, a $1,600 check from his club and even a baby pig. But when he settled down to work he got a 3-1 trimming from the Cincinnati Reds whose Johnny Vander Meer was in seven-hit form.

The New York Giants ran the last-place Phillie's losing streak to eight in a row by winning the first half of their double bill, 5-4, getting four runs on homers. But then the Terrymen, riding a three-game victory string that was their longest since June, rode it to a fall as Veteran Si Johnson turned them back, 4-3.

In the American League the New York Yankees took two from the Philadelphia Athletics, 11-2 and 4-1, and thereby climbed back into a 14-game lead over Cleveland. The Indians helped things along by bowing to Ted Lyons and Thornton Lee of the Chicago White Sox, who held them to six hits apiece in winning by 5-2 and 2-1 respectively.

The Boston Red Sox were their slugging selves in trimming the Washington Senators, 7-6, but in the nightcap couldn't bunch their 10 hits off Venezuelan Alejandro Carrasquel, who chalked up an 8-2 triumph.

Buck Newsom, of the Detroit Tigers, who hasn't won a game since July 15, didn't win one yesterday, either. The St. Louis Browns got to him early for nine hits in four innings, got six more off Schoolboy Rowe, and won, 7-3.

CLAWSON HURLS TWIN TRIUMPHS FOR HOSPITAL

A confliction of dates left the State Hospital in a predicament last Saturday with two opponents for their weekly date at the North Warren diamond. So, not having any other solution, they played both and added two decisions to the right side of the ledger.

The first victims were the Jamestown Vikings, who lost by a score of 10 to 5 in a seven inning game. Next, a combination of Marconi and Eagle players dropped a five inning encounter which no one cares to write home about by a 9 to 3 count.

Chuck (Dipsey-Doodle) Clawson pulled the old "iron man" stunt out of the bag and tossed both games, twelve innings of ball over which route he displayed his goods which are ample as to pitching possibilities.

Clawson won the above "nickie" with nine strikeouts in the first game and five more in the second for a total of fourteen to show for the day's work.

Harold Brown, who with Clawson forms Warren's popular baseball twins, walloped a home run in the first encounter scoring two runs and aiding the Swansonmen in their rout of the Jamestown club.

The summary:

Home On the Range With Seabiscuit

Owner Charles S. Howard saddles Seabiscuit for workout on ranch near Willits, Cal., where turf's greatest money winner is in stud. Daily exercise keeps the racing immortal in condition.

It's been quite a spell since this community has produced any ball players who even hint that that they may be big league material some day, but this day and age finds us with a couple more who may be added to the past greats in this section in a few years to come. Now, we don't pretend to be experts as scouts for big league ivory, but when we see a nice red apple among some that are still slightly green, we know which one to eat. And so with the present crop of ball players in this community we have a knowledge as to which are the cream and which are only average baseball players. The two current candidates for big league recognition in a few years are Harold "Buster" Brown and Charles "Gabby" Clawson, with possibly "Monk" Murphy, North Warren lad, having a good chance also. The two former boys seem set to play some kind of minor league ball next year, for they'd be a cinch to grab places in the lineup of any PONY League club. Personally, we feel they're too fast for the PONY Leaguers and would be willing to bet they could bid for and win a position on many Class C teams of today, with their current experience.

Murphy is right behind them. In fact, he's right with them most of the time, and hasn't played before this year, whereas both of the other two had high school experience. And "Monk" is the nicest looking youngster on third base this observer has noticed in the past five years. When he goes into the dirt for a grounder, no matter what kind of hit, the chances are that "Monk" throws the batter out at first. He seldom makes an error and his steady batting (he owns a keen batting eye) makes him a value man who will be even better with another year or two of seasoning. This corner's unbiased opinion, though maybe it isn't asked for, is that any of these three kids would be worth the gamble of at least a season for any major league club. What's more, this writer believes that at least one will some day play major league ball. Unlike Morrison and Elmo Wolfe when their breaks finally came around, and unlike, too, Gerry Giegerich, who now we doubt will ever hit the big time, these three lads have the advantage of being heard about before hitting twenty. Brown is only nineteen, and he just turned that. The other two gladiators won't be nineteen until late this year. So two years of experience will still leave them young and ready for a long major league career, which, as we said, at least one of them should earn in time.

Just off the grid-dle . . . It's time we made personal mention of the change in coaching personnel in this section in our daily blatter . . . So as to Benton Kribbs leaving Youngsville High, we hate to see you leave, pal, but good luck in your new job as teacher in the Otto township school . . . and also the best of the same to your successor, Harry F. Stockdale, former star at Slippery Rock and Duke University and ex-coach at South Park, Pa., High School . . . And then there's Oil City High School's Mike Ferrare, who didn't have a chance to show his real wares at that town in the last two seasons as head coach, mainly because of insufficient grid material, but now should really come into his own at Erie East, where he will take over the head coaching duties . . . he's going home, for Mike was born in the lake port . . . Better fortunes ahead for you, Michael . . . And now, since we're well-wishing all football mentors in this breeze, the same to our own "Jake" Leidig and to Doc Reese, who'll be coaching the high school and Red Jacket elevens, respectively, in this community this autumn.

LUDLOW BLANKS EAGLES AGAIN BY 2-0 SCORE

A three hit shutout was too much for the Warren Eagles in a weekend battle with the Ludlow Wildcats at Ludlow and they lost a 2 to 0 decision over a seven inning route.

Larry Anderson, seventeen year-old youngster headed for the PONY League next season, did the tossing. He fanned ten batters over the distance. Earlier in the season in scoring a 3-0 conquest over the Eagles, Anderson whiffed a third strike past seventeen batters.

A fluke home run jarred the Eagles pitcher who only gave up five hits in the encounter, but blasted him for one of two runs, the other tally following shortly afterward.

Harampolis, Ludlow shortstop, hit a liner that fell safely just beyond third base in the last of the sixth inning. It bounded foul and into a stream which runs along the park, and with no ground rules covering such a play, went for a home run.

A triple was gained in a similar manner by Pochatko out along the first base line, and he scored on a pop foul which Baker caught along the third base line.

Forgers Beaten 4-3 By Mike Cannavino's Meadville Pioneers

The Meadville Pioneers pushed a run over in the top half of the seventh inning yesterday afternoon at Irvine to whip the National Forge 4 to 3 after a nip and tuck ball game over the first six cantos.

The Forge jumped off to a one-run lead in the first inning, but the Pioneers took the lead with two in the second.

In the third, the Forgers tied it up with another counter, only to have their visitors come back in the fourth with another score.

Then in the sixth, the losers scored again to force another deadlock but the Pioneers cashed in with the payoff tally in the seventh frame.

"Red" Hajnik and "Emmy" Morrison were effective at bat with two hits apiece in five times at the plate. Dick Giegerich was the real pacer, however, with two in four attempts.

Only Freddie Gagliardi's triple in the eighth inning was a smack that earned extra bases for any batsman in the game.

Tomorrow night the two teams go at it again at Meadville, the fracas slated to start at 8:15 o'clock.

Next Sunday's game at Wilder Field now is undecided, the Celtics may not be here, but another strong club is lined up to replace them in any event the Akron outfit can't make the date.

Sports Round-up

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, Jr.
(Pinch Hitting for Eddie Brietz)

New York, Aug. 11.—(The Special News Service)—Week's wash: Best reading we've seen in some time is the "Upton Nooz," doughboy paper from Camp Upton, N. Y . . . Leo Waldman, former N. Y. Herald-Tribune writer, does the sports editing and reports the Upton ball team is so hot the local folks call 'em "Senior Dodgers" . . . Frank Leahy came right out in public at the Texas High School Football Coaches Association meeting and told them material counts more than anything else in their business . . . And don't you think the listeners didn't believe him, what with all the coaches in the state around to get a look at the kids playing in the All-Star game . . . A dozen of the All-Stars are headed for Texas A. and M. this fall and 10 for Rice . . . The U. S. G. A. finally has decided that golfers know enough to come in out of the rain . . . The Association just passed a rule that when tournament players think there's danger of being hit by lightning they can stop without waiting for a signal from the tournament committee.

Midwestern harness fans better get a look at Bill Gallon, the Hambletonian winner, while they have a chance. His owner let most of the colt's three-year-old engagements lapse when he didn't show much early speed, so from now on he'll have to race against the crack older horses or not at all . . . Giant fans (yes, there still are some) agree with Horace Stoneham in stringing along with Bill Terry as manager, but they say Horace should get himself a new club for Bill to manage . . . Alice Marble and her coach, Eleanor Tennant, expect to get a sponsor soon for a proposed radio program. Eleanor will talk about tennis. Alice, you know, can sing but we'd rather watch her make court opponents moan . . . Will Lou Nova be Joe Louis' successor as champion? Well, he was once. He took the National A. A. U. title right after Joe held it.

We hear that Greenberg got a raise
And now collects a Corporal's pay.
And after getting fifty grand
It likely seems like so much hay.

Until the army takes Bob Feller.

Sportpourri

The Dodgers are going to throw a "night" Wednesday for Red Barber, who airs their games . . . Paul Brown, the Ohio State coach, has registered at the Northwestern football coaching school, where Michigan's Fritz Crisler is a prof. . . All Brown wants to learn is how to beat Michigan . . . Danny MacFayden and Shanty Hogan are two of the applicants for the job of managing the Hartford Eastern League club . . . Diz Dean, who's never been anything but a Gashouser at heart, picks the Cards to win the National League pennant . . . Detroit should be a red-hot sports town this winter, due to the cash rolling in from the defense program. The football Lions already have a $40,000 advance sale and Jack Adams has been around predicting a whale of a hockey season.

Eight Grid Contests Carded at Smethport

Smethport, Aug. 9—The following football schedule for the 1941 season has been released by Harry Schmidt, athletic director of the Smethport High School:

Sept. 6—Alumni (H).
Sept. 13—Otto—(A).
Sept. 20—Port Allegany (A).
Oct. 4—Bradford J. V.'s—(H).
Oct. 11—Coudersport (A).
Oct. 18—Coudersport (H).
Nov. 1—Otto—(H).
Nov. 11—(Tuesday—Port Allegany (H).

Coach Schmidt stated that only four lettermen will be available from last year's squad. They are: Mel Lemon and Ralph Scowden, seniors; and Hanford Johnson and Glen Mencer, juniors. However, he reported that he has a promising group of candidates in Bill Lemon, Leonard Slocum, John Maynard, George Thompson, George Bermender, Ed Head, Fred Burlingame, Bill Potter and Dick Carlson, with which to round out a starting lineup.

It is expected that with the consolidation of Norwich Township High School with the local school many boys will be anxious to play football this year.

MEETING TONIGHT

All Church League managers are requested to be on hand for a meeting tonight at the Y. M. C. A. at 8:30 o'clock. The meeting won't be long, but is important and all pilots are asked to be present.

Correspondent Tells of Visit to German-Captured City of Smolensk

revealed that Stalin's scorched earth program was only partly successful here.

Minsk and Vitebsk, over which the plane flew low, appeared desolate—but not to the extent of Smolensk.

In between, however, hundreds of straw-thatched villages, dark spots in a yellow ccuntryside, for the most part seemed untouched. The war apparently had swept past them, dealing the more destructive blows to the larger communities.

Here and there could be seen the blackened ruins of villages. In one case a whole community of about 60 houses was burning briskly as we flew over.

Even in such cases, however, villages remained nearby.

Between these villages stretched rye and wheat fields gleaming golden in the sun. The crops were not destroyed. They were too green to burn at the time the Russians withdrew from the Smolensk area. Now much of the grain has been harvested. Large numbers of persons were seen at work in the fields—many of them women, barefoot, brown and husky—who toiled on, paying little heed to soldiers or the war.

In its Sunday communique dealing with activity on the eastern front, the high command reverted to the brief phrase: "Operations in the east are proceeding according to plan." At the same time it said more than 10,000 Russian planes were destroyed, including those on the Finnish front, since the war with Russia began June 22.

tars, 31 light machine guns, six anti-tank guns, 10 automobiles and several motorcycles.

Moscow's civilian casualties mounted as several waves of German planes attacked overnight in the 16th raid on the Soviet capital. Incendiaries touched off fires in the ruin of dwellings smashed by high explosives.

The Russians reported that, like the night before, only a few of the raiders broke through the city's defenses of anti-aircraft fire and night fighters. Five raiders were reported downed last night during the alarm which lasted four hours and 15 minutes, and 10 in the mass raid Saturday night.

(DNB said nearly 100 planes attacked the Soviet capital Saturday night, showering the city with thousands of incendiaries and scoring a direct hit on the Kremlin with one big bomb.)

Pravda, Communist party organ, commented during the weekend that the German armies "have not yet lost their power of advance," but Russian commentators declared the Red army still could cope with all the blitzkrieg the Germans have left.

Russian frontline forces already were reported bolstered by growing forces of the peoples' army called to arms by Premier Joseph Stalin July 3.

The semi-monthly publication Bolshevik declared yesterday that tens of thousands of other civilians in the Moscow area were being taught street fighting with grenades, rifles and bayonets.

an would consolidate her southern flank, then turn northward.

Some of these quarters, especially Chinese, said they believed Japan now may think it best to consolidate her hand throughout Asia wherever possible. This, they said, would point toward an attack on Siberia rather than creating further conditions for a southern Pacific break with Britain if not with the United States.

There were reports that Mitsuru Toyama, head of Japan's famous Black Dragon Society, and other influential secret society leaders again were putting pressure on the government for a firmer national policy.

While opinion originally was that Japan would await a decisive defeat of the Russian army by the Germans, it now was believed that she has waited only to bring feverish preparations throughout Japan, Manchukuo and North China to completion.

Wall Street, a bit weary, had to make two trips to carry his suitcase, a basket and two red twine bags to the car. The chauffeur, looking ill at ease as Whitney trudged painfully up with the heavy suitcase, was not permitted to enter the prison gates to help.

As he left, he was given a pair of gold cuff links taken from him when he entered April 12, 1938. He declined the state's customary offer of a new suit, but accepted $192.86 in cash. This represented $163.36 in prison pay, $9.50 of his personal money and the state's rehabilitation fee, which he thriftily took.

Since he had $11.85 when he first entered the prison, he left $181.01 richer.

When he said that attack on the United States could begin with domination of any base which menaced our security, he declared "we will not hesitate to use our armed forces to repel attack."

Old Age And Survivors Insurance Payments Increase in Pennsylvania

Philadelphia, Aug. 7—Monthly old-age and survivors insurance payments in Pennsylvania increased more than 25 percent during the first three months of 1941, both in the number of recipients and in the amount of money, it was announced today by William L. Dill, regional director of the Social Security Board.

At the end of March, 32,865 men, women and children were receiving monthly checks which amounted to $607,707, it was revealed by figures just tabulated. This, Mr. Dill pointed out, was at the rate of $7,292,000 a year.

The figures relate only to the all-federal family insurance plan and do not include allowances under any of the federal-state public assistance programs.

While gains were registered in all six types of monthly payments, exceptional increases were made in payments to widows. A 63 percent rise was recorded in payments to widows above 65, who are not required to have dependent children in order to be eligible. Monthly checks were sent in March to widows with dependent children was revealed. These payments are made regardless of the widow's age. The March checks amounted to $162,994 for 3,221 such widows.

Mr Dill explained that the increase in claims from aged widows is at least partly attributable to the beneficient operation of a 1939 amendment which permits workers to become fully insured after they attain age 65.

For the first time since monthly benefits became payable at the start of 1940, the number of retired workers fell below 50 percent of the total. In March, 16,038 retired workers drew checks for $369,854. Increased employment opportunities have curtailed retirement of aged men considerably, Mr. Dill said, and, in fact, have caused many retired workers to leave the benefit rolls and return to work in defense and related employment. When they cease work again, their monthly benefits will be resumed.

More than one-fourth of the retired workers had wives about age 65 who receive each month, one-half as much as the primary beneficiary. There were 4,547 such wives on the benefit rolls during March and their payments amounted to $55,123.

Monthly payments to dependent children of deceased or retired workers increased one-third during the three-months period, with 8,101 recipients receiving $100,938 a month.

While insurance payments are made to aged parents only in cases where they were dependent upon an insured worker who died, and then only if the worker left no widow or dependent child, payments in this category were made to 114 persons and amounted to $1,518 in March.

In virtually all cases where an insured worker dies without leaving a survivor who is entitled emmediately to monthly checks, a lump sum benefit is paid. In many cases such payments are made to widows without children before they reach age 65, and monthly payments are begun when the widow becomes 65, Mr. Dill said.

"The spread of benefits in Pennsylvania has reached proportions that compel recognition of the fact that the Old-Age and Survivors Insurance program offers substantial protection to the entire family against the hazards of old-age and death", Mr. Dill said. "Not only is this program enabling many persons to leave the public assistance rolls of the State, but it is enabling many others to avoid acceptance of public charity and is holding together many families that otherwise might be separated when death removes the breadwinner."

MADE UP TO KILL

Chapter 14

This Murder

BOWERS hadn't risen from his desk. He sat hunched over the disorderly mass of papers, his head bowed in his hands. When he lifted his face to us, I was shocked at its gray haggardness. Philip coughed a forced, stagy cough.

"We . . . we couldn't help overhearing, Clint. 'Green Apples' is closing then?"

Bowers nodded. "Yes. Definitely."

"Then . . . I suppose it will be all right for me to accept any offer that might come my way? I'm considering Hollywood."

"It'll be all right so far as I'm concerned. The police, however . . ."

Ashley smiled a sort of grave amusement. "I hardly think there will be any difficulty there. After all, my long record on the American stage . . ."

"Your long record on the American stage!" I repeated indignantly. His calm assurance made me sick at my stomach. "What's that got to do with whether or not you tried to kill Carol?"

"Relax, Haila." Jeff put his hand on my shoulder.

"It's quite all right," Ashley said, oozing with patronage. "We're all horribly upset and overwrought. It's been a frightful experience, this . . . this . . ."

"This murder," Bowers said quietly.

We had all been chanting "Murder" for the past twenty-four hours. It had become the prime word in our vocabularies and had almost lost any connotation. But when Bowers said it now, so quietly and bluntly, it found its place again, and Eve's horrible dead body and Carol's scared white face were with us in the room.

Jeff moved uneasily. "I'm afraid I didn't exactly live up to my recommendation of myself."

"No," Bowers said. "You couldn't help it. Don't blame yourself, Jeff. I asked you to watch Carol."

"I might have watched . . . a little further."

"You couldn't know that Eve would pick up Carol's cape and stand there, where in a minute Carol would be standing, looking like Carol. . . ."

"Madness," Ashley said.

"Eve didn't think. She needed something to cover her scars, and she took the first thing she could find. She didn't think about murder; she thought about her entrance. Eve was like that. No, Jeff, there was nothing anybody could have done."

"Darling, you did your best," I said. "Clint knows that. Why, even Peterson couldn't prevent it."

"My responsibility was greater than his. He was doing a job that had been assigned. It was routine for him. I was trying to do a job that I'd made for myself. And I failed." He stopped and took a deep breath. "Well, the point is, I'm going on. And you can forget that money was ever mentioned yesterday, Clint."

Bowers looked at him for a long moment. "We won't forget anything, Jeff. Since last night . . . since Eve . . ." He swung his chair around so that his face was turned from us.

No one spoke. It was as though all of us were searching our minds for the right thing to say and there was no right thing. At last Philip coughed again and stood up.

"It's a beastly business. I wish there were something I could do. I know there isn't. Just . . . if ever you have anything for me again, Clint, I'd consider it a privilege to play for you."

"If ever I produce again."

"But of course you will! And soon, old man, very soon." Philip patted him on the shoulder.

"Without Eve? I haven't produced a play in five years without Eve. No play comes into this office except some agent thinks there is an Eve North part in it." He wasn't talking to us; he was thinking out loud. "I've built every production around her. Everyone in the cast a contrast to her. Every set a background for her. I . . . I wouldn't know how to go about producing without Eve."

Once More, Lee Gray

HE STOPPED and his eyes, soft and sad, turned bitter. He stared unseeingly at the sheaf of papers on his desk. We made mumbled exits that Bowers scarcely noticed.

I walked between Jeff and Ashley up to Broadway, breathing the crisp air gustily as though I might expel with it the tragic atmosphere of that office over the Colony. Philip was going on again at greater length to explain how Eve's murder was inconveniencing him personally. At Times Square a delivery truck pulled up to a kiosk and dumped a bundle of papers. I slipped away and bought one to see what was being said about the case. Jeff flicked the front section from me. I turned to the theatrical pages while Philip droned away, seemingly unaware of our lack of attention.

In the notes of coming productions I saw something that made me gulp in astonishment, and it was a minute before I could collect enough breath to speak.

"Jeff! Jeff, listen to this! 'For his next production "Though Heavens Fall," Vincent Parker has engaged Morgan Thomsand, Marge Flint and . . . and Lee Gray!'"

Jeff ripped the paper from my hand. I pointed to the item and he read it aloud as if he expected the name, if it had been there at all, to be gone by now. ". . . Morgan Thomsand, Marge Flint and Lee Gray. Haila, who is Vincent Parker? Does he have an office? Where is it?"

"It's in Radio City. I know him."

"C'mon," Jeff said, "let's get moving."

"Just a second." Ashley put his hand on Jeff's arm. "Are you . . . are you going to Parker's office now? Immediately?"

"Sooner than that. C'mon, Ashley, walk up with us."

"No, thanks. I wouldn't be seen in Parker's office. I couldn't afford to. Besides, I've a terribly important appointment downtown."

"Wall Street, no doubt," I said maliciously.

"As a matter of fact, it is Wall Street. Taxi!"

Ashley stepped into his cab and I had to run to catch up with Jeff who was halfway across Broadway by that time.

On Sixth Avenue he didn't even stop, as he usually did, to make sure the khaki colored men digging the new subway were getting along all right. Breathless, I grabbed his arm and pulled myself abreast of him. "Jeff . . ."

Jeff snorted and two middle-aged women gaped at me. Automatically, I still raised my voice to a shriek on Sixth Avenue to combat the roar of the El trains that were no longer extant.

I tried again, in a softer tone. "Jeff, shouldn't Peterson know about this?"

"He probably does. Save your air. We should've taken a cab."

Mr. Parker

AT RADIO CITY we took one of those rocket ships they call express elevators and I answered the operator's questioning look. "Sixty-two." He punched the button with a flip of his knuckle and leaned back against the wall, waiting for the car to fill. When he had become convinced that no one would ride in the same elevator with Jeff and me, he took off for the sixty-second floor.

The doors slid open and we stepped out. Jeff started to say something, then stopped. I glanced in the direction he was staring. Backing slowly into the next car, while the crowd settled in the rear, was Philip Ashley. The doors closed. It was impossible for Ashley not to have seen us, but his eyes gave no flicker of recognition. His face was dead pan.

"Well," I said, "so this is Wall Street."

"Yeah."

"But why should he do that?"

"Maybe he wanted to find out about Lee Gray before we did. We'll see."

Parker's secretary announced me over the telephone without first asking my name. That made me feel fine and smug. That girl and her colleagues had almost nipped my theatrical career in the bud until one day I had managed to slip past her, and Vincent Parker had given me my first part in New York.

Mr. Parker would see me in a few minutes. In answer to Jeff's question, the secretary told him that Philip Ashley had not been in to see Parker within the last few minutes or, as far as she knew, ever. Jeff sat down beside me.

"Haila," he said, "let me do the talking about L. G."

Vincent Parker opened his door and beckoned to me. He looked like five and a half feet of rainbow with his dark-blue shirt, yellow knitted tie, brown tweed suit and very conservative battleship gray spats. His face split in a grin that shook his ears. When Jeff followed me into the office he flattered me by looking disappointed that I wasn't alone.

"She's my girl," Jeff explained. "I never leave her alone with strange men."

"If you think I'm strange you oughta see my brother!" Parker said. When he had stopped laughing I introduced Jeff to him and we seated ourselves, Parker behind his huge, streamlined desk, Jeff and I on a luxurious divan that Vincent must have bought secondhand from some insolvent Caliph.

"Nicely appointed chamber," Jeff said. He had nearly broken my neck to get us up here and now he was being the suave, casual Philo Vance type. "Who decorated your office? Billy Rose?"

"Billy Rose? Naw. Great little fellow, though. I knew Billy when he was shorthand champion of the world. Billy thinks a lot of me and I've always admired him, too."

"I understand you're going to do a play, Mr. Parker," I said, trying to get Jeff to the point.

"When you call me Mr. Parker, Haila, I don't know to who you are referring. The first name is Vincent. It ain't as if we were mere acquaintances. I give you your start on Broadway. Tell me if I'm wrong."

"Vincent," I blurted, "who is Lee Gray? What is she, where is she?"

Parker beamed. "You want to know, too, huh?"

"Too!" Jeff barked. "Who else has been asking?"

"The cops. One of the drama-page boys on the Post tipped them off when he seen my press release. I figured it would raise plenty of comment."

"Well, who is Lee Gray?"

"Frankly, Haila, I don't know."

Threat to Singapore Seen Endangering Philippines

By THOMAS M. JOHNSON
NEA Service Military Writer

Washington, Aug. 11.—Japan's demand for bases in Thailand points a loaded gun at Singapore. The threat to the great British naval base is obvious. What few Americans realize is that the threat to us is just as great if we intend to defend the Philippines.

Except for Singapore (it is an open secret that Britain has promised us use of this great naval base), we have no fleet operating base in the whole Far East. Cavite and Olongapo—thanks to arms limitation treaties—lack adequate facilities, notably drydocks.

A fleet can operate only 2500 miles from base. To fight in the Philippines, ships of our Pacific Fleet must first traipse out from Hawaii and then, if injured, limp back through a Pacific infested with islands we let Japan keep in 1919. It would be well over 5000 miles out and 5000 back. The Japanese Fleet has only a fifth as far to travel to reach Manila.

But from Singapore, a harbor which can hold and service the world's navies, to the Philippines is only 1330 miles. So if we intend to defend the Philippines, as President Roosevelt's recent mobilization of the islands' forces indicates we do, the safety of Singapore is vital to America.

To guard the safety of this fortified island at the tip of the spindling Malay Peninsula, the British have great land fortifications and American heavy bombers. Air Marshall Sir Robert Brooke-Popham commands British, Scottish, Australian, Malay and Indian troops — totaling 150,000 and steadily augmenting.

But he could withstand Japanese air attack from 400-mile distant Thailand, followed by land attack along the narrow Malay peninsula, only for a matter of months, according to estimate. For sea defense British warships are few, being needed in the Atlantic. In the Pacific, Britain depends largely on us. And, now that the Administration has decided to fight for the Philippines, we depend on Singapore.

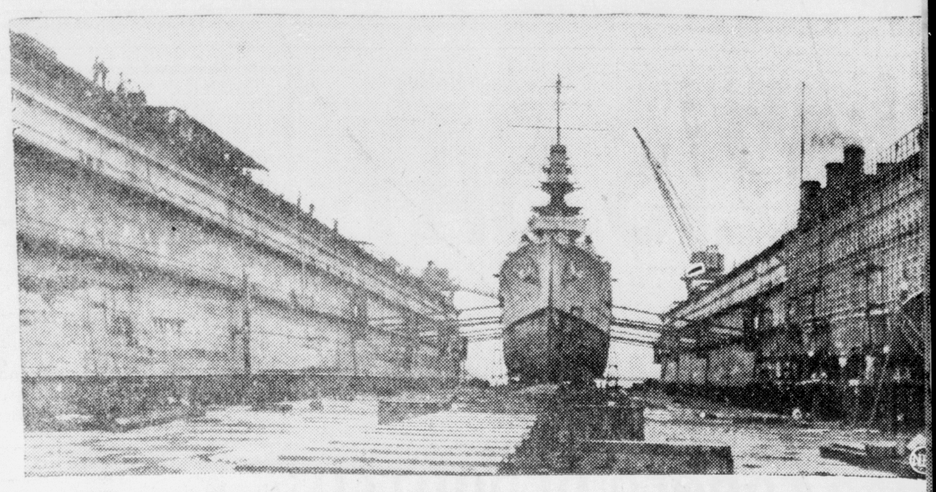

Without Singapore our Asiatic Fleet now in the Philippines could make only a delaying defense, aided by aircraft, especially long-range bombers. These have lately been flown to the islands in numbers intended to compensate for warships sent to the Atlantic before the occupation of Iceland—which swap of sea power for air power may or may not have encouraged Japan to move into Thai.

Certainly it has not stopped her from edging very close to crisis with us. For from Thailand the next logical step is to Singapore. So real a menace is that to us that Japan might not make it at all without simultaneously attacking the Philippines, which flank her line of communications. She might risk it for the very reason that she understands why Singapore means so much to us.

In addition to Singapore we have been promised use of a new base Britain is establishing in Borneo and even of a so-called "secret base" in Ceylon, of the bases Britain's Dutch ally holds in Surabaya and Amboina, and of Australia's Port Darwin.

other side from the immediate danger from Japan in French Indo-China and Thailand. We need more time to strengthen our supply line for the Philippines via Wake and Midway islands, culminating in the support position at Guam that Congress long refused to fortify.

Japan's move into Thailand may be preliminary to an attack on the British at Singapore, or a threat to keep them quiet during a Japanese move north against Soviet Siberia. Regardless, Singapore's safety is a pillar of our Far Eastern strategy—not just Singapore's safety for Britain, but Singapore's safety for us. Our need to hold up that pillar will explain future moves in the Indies.

The U. S. Asiatic Fleet's Philippine bases at Cavite and Olongapo are inadequate to repair large ships, being particularly lacking in drydock facilities. This huge floating drydock at Singapore is but one of the vital facilities the great British naval base offers to American ships.
